

American Fliers On European Soil Upon Globe Tour

All Planes Reached Constantinople in Good Shape Thursday Afternoon After Short Stop at Aleppo.

THRILLED AT FLIGHT ACROSS BOSPHORUS

Aviators Will Leave Saturday for Bucharest, Roumania, and Then-into Western Europe.

Constantinople, July 10.—Lieutenants Smith, Wade and Nelson, the three American round-the-world fliers, arrived here in quick succession at 3 o'clock Thursday, after leaving Aleppo at 6 a. m.

Officials from the American embassy welcomed them as they landed on European soil for the first time in their globe-circling flight.

"It was a beautiful trip," said Smith enthusiastically. "In flying over Taurus, we went through some clouds. We were thrilled at flying across the Bosphorus."

"We are not tired, but we are sleepy,"

The fliers will continue their journey westward into Europe Saturday, their first stop taking them to Bucharest, the capital of Roumania. From there their route will take them over Austria and into western Europe.

The American colony here had arranged a cordial welcome for the fliers.

The American fliers left Bagdad Wednesday morning on the 965-mile hop to Constantinople.

$60,000 Order For Class Room Units Is Placed

Housing for 2,400 White Pupils Will Be Provided on Their Completion.

An order for $60,000 worth of portable class room units was placed with the West Lumber company by the purchasing committee of the board of education Thursday afternoon, under authority granted by the board of education. It was announced by John T. Hancock, president, Thursday night.

The order includes about 60 class room units and will provide housing accommodations by opening of school in September for approximately 2,400 or 3,500 white pupils for whom no seats had been provided. More portable, or temporary, units are to be purchased during the summer.

Six units are to be used at the new Henry Grady high school, which will be completed by opening of school in September, but will fall at least 200 short of having enough seating capacity for the combined Boys' High and Tech High student bodies.

Other units are to be at Grant Park, Fair street and Slaton schools, to which pupils who attended Hill street school last year have been assigned. The committee did not order the portables to be used at Hill street school to house the overflow from the first grade Junior High school pupils who are to attend school in the Hill street building, as it is awaiting a definite report from the census department on the number who are to attend there.

The so-called portable units are to be placed at every school which will have an overflow attendance this year. They will be of a type similar to those now in use at many schools of wooden construction, one-story in height and large enough to seat about 15 pupils.

At schools where more than two class room units will be needed, they will be built in sections of four or more class rooms, in order to save the cost of outside walls on some of the units.

A State With Deposits Of $350,000,000 in the Banks

Figures for the past year show that Georgia banks had on hand in 1923 deposits amounting to more than $350,000,000.

In creating this great cash reserve, banks and depositors have cooperated.

Thousands of depositors and many financial institutions have learned of one another through the news and advertising columns of The Atlanta Constitution—the newspaper which for more than half a century in Atlanta has proved the outstanding source of information for readers who desire accurate facts from honest sources.

The Constitution--A Newspaper!

No better vindication of the accuracy and the impartiality of The Constitution as a newspaper could be asked than the outcome of the national democratic convention. From the very beginning the first purpose of this newspaper was to keep its readers advised as to the truth of the situation by giving them accurate reports of the daily developments of the convention. Neither by propaganda nor by the presentation of "half truth" did it mislead them.

Our staff representatives were instructed to get the facts and to print them, whoever might be hurt or helped.

This was done, and every statement published has been verified by the result.

With The Constitution's staff correspondents — Mr. Hollomon, associate editor, and Mr. Stokes, Washington correspondent — preparing their reports under these instructions, and with the signed comment articles of Mark Sullivan, for many years acknowledged as America's greatest political commentator, and Raymond Clapper, a new star in the comment world, contributing each day to the news columns of The Constitution, and with no whetstone to grind, The Constitution was peculiarly equipped to cover the 1924 democratic convention in a manner which would be marked by the greatest accuracy and impartiality. With these four nationally-known commentators interpreting the activities of the convention and the actual news developments from day to day being told by the Associated Press and United News, the nation's two greatest news-gathering organizations, The Constitution was enabled to meet its obligation to its readers in a way that more than justifies its reputation as a newspaper whose first duty is to GIVE THE NEWS.

Readers of newspapers are entitled to a fair, impartial and unbiased presentation of the news—from which they may draw their own conclusions from day to day.

This is, and always will be, the policy of The Constitution.

The news columns of a newspaper should be held for NEWS—not propaganda!

No greater tribute was ever paid a newspaper than that which speaks the accuracy of The Constitution's news reports of this historic convention.

SON OF PRESIDENT IS LAID TO REST IN ANCESTRAL LOT

Calvin Coolidge, Jr., Is Buried With Simple Rites Amid Tall Green Mountains of Vermont.

NOTCH MARKS HEIGHT OF YOUNG CAL AT DEATH.

Plymouth, Vt., July 10.—"C. C. 1924, if alive."

This mark was made on a white-painted door-sill of his father's home Thursday by the president of the United States. It measured the approximate height of Calvin Coolidge, Jr., at the time of his death. Young Cal had just been placed in the ground in the mountain side cemetery. The president then took his son, John, up to the old home and stood him against the door as he had done once a year for 10 years with both boys.

He marked John's height, higher than his own. Then he looked at the last mark made for young Cal last summer and with his pencil made another mark about half an inch higher—the last one.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Plymouth, Vt., July 10.—In the little village cemetery where the maples and evergreens throw long shadows across the old tombstones on the hillside, they buried Calvin Coolidge, 16-year-old son and namesake of the president, today. Restraining in large part outward manifestations of their sorrow, the president, Mrs. Coolidge and John, the elder son, stood with bowed heads during the short, simple commitment service until a marine bugler had blown "taps" across the grave.

The cemetery where Calvin was laid to rest lies on a little hill dominated by the Green Mountains, which overshadow this village. In the family plot lie the mother of the president, his ancestors and kinsmen. In the same grassy row where the grave was dug are spaces reserved for the last resting places of the president, John and his mother.

Official Party Attend.

Much of official Washington, including eight cabinet members, the speaker of the nation's house of representatives and the governors of two states attended the services. The party from Washington came in the closely guarded train, which was halted at Northampton for services in the Edwards Congregational church where Calvin was a member.

After the last note of "taps" had echoed away, the family group went for a short time to the old white farm house of the president's father, Colonel John C. Coolidge, where the president took his oath of office on August 3, a year ago. Then, accompanied by the elder Coolidge, the little family, broken now by death, started on the journey back to Washington.

The funeral party upon arrival this afternoon at the Ludlow railroad station, 13 miles away, halted at the six marines from the presidential yacht Mayflower, who had guarded the boy's bier constantly in Washington and on the train, carried the casket to the waiting hearse. Then the procession, more than a mile long, drove over the long road among the hills to the burial ground.

The party was forced to walk up the hillside to the spot where the grave had been prepared. After the marines had lowered the casket into

DAVIS TO CARRY FIGHT WESTWARD IN PERSONAL TOUR

Democratic Nominee Will Battle for Votes With Coolidge and La Follette in Progressive Arena.

DEADLOCK PROSPECT IN NOVEMBER GROWS

Davis Severs Connections With Law Firm to Prepare for Strenuous Platform Campaign.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

New York, July 10.—John W. Davis has decided that his first task as the democratic presidential nominee is to dispel any impression that he is a "Wall street candidate."

Davis met with the democratic national committee Thursday to discuss plans for waging a campaign which will be directed especially at the progressive west.

Following this conference, Davis announced that he was severing, temporarily at least, his connection with the law firm of Stetson, Jennings, Russell & Davis, attorneys for J. P. Morgan. He said he would go to his old home at Clarksville, W. Va., for the formal ceremonies incident to his official notification of the nomination. Most important of all, he announced his intention of making a campaign trip through the west to talk face to face with the farmers and the progressive, independent voters of the west.

Is a Clean Fight.

Thus the democratic nominee, with his ability as an orator, his friendly, genial manner, and his commanding platform presence, hopes to convince the voters of the west that the country would be safe in his hands.

Among those who have known Davis as a congressman, as solicitor general of the department of justice and as ambassador to Great Britain, such a campaign would be totally unnecessary. Even among his political opponents at Washington Davis is known

Athens To Give Andrew Erwin Royal Welcome

Editors of Nation Praise "Fiery and Fearless Young Georgian."

Athens, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—

Athenians of all walks of life are joining in preparations to give a whole-hearted welcome to Andrew C. Erwin when he arrives home this week after springing into the national limelight by his outspoken declaration for the anti-Ku Klux Klan plank in New York last week.

In taking a stand in the democratic convention, Mr. Erwin was running true to form, it is pointed out here. Regardless of his personal preferences, it would be hard to find an Athenian who will not admit that Mr. Erwin was speaking from a disinterested viewpoint and taking a stand which he thought was right for the party to take.

Athenians remember Andrew Erwin's fearless stand on all questions of civic importance in recent years, and the fact that he came out so boldly in support of his convictions in the great democratic party convocation was but natural and elicited no unusual amount of surprise in his home town. That newspaper editors, writers, and political observers of the county at most in unison praised the "fiery young Georgian" is, of course, appreciated by this city.

Nation-Wide Praise.

It is putting it mildly to say that the majority of Mr. Erwin's home-folks—citizens of Athens and this section of the state—are proud of him. Not since ante-bellum days has a Georgian—and Athens was the home of more than one of those who ranked high in the councils of the party in power in those days—been accorded such prominence in the deliberations of a national political party, and leaders in every section, feature writers, editorial writers, magazine editors and others are commenting on his speech in words of praise.

Writing in "The New Republic," Bruce Blyden, one of the editors commenting on Mr. Erwin's speech, said that his speech and that of Newton D. Baker were the only ones of the convention worth enduring the heat and monotony to hear. Oswald Garrison Villard, editor and owner of The New York Evening

Debs Telegraphs Congratulations To John W. Davis

Old Socialist Leader Has Warm Spot for Man Who Defended Him.

Chicago, July 10.—Ill in a sanitarium here, Eugene V. Debs, five times presidential candidate of the socialist party, sent a message of congratulation Thursday to his old friend, John W. Davis, of West Virginia. His message expressed the pleasure of a man who probably never would be president over the fact that a god man who might be had obtained the democratic nomination.

Debs has been a sanitarium patient for several weeks. His condition is such that his physicians allow him to see no one except hospital attendants. During the coming campaign, he is reported to have said in letters to friends that he expects to support La Follette.

The socialist leader has a warm spot in his heart for Davis which dates back to the time when Debs and "Mother" Jones were arrested during a coal strike in West Virginia. Davis defended them.

PARTY COMMITTEE DELAYS FORMATION FOR THREE WEEKS

Formal Organization of National Committee to Follow Notification Ceremonies.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, July 10.—Eager to attack post-convention details the democratic national committee found itself today unable to bring fagged wits to serious business and decided to put off the formalities of organizing for the campaign until overworked executives and party leaders caught up on sleep.

Tonight New York was a deserted village so far as the national convention was concerned. Hastily abandoned campaign buttons and multicolored badges were heaped in various hotel repositories as evidences of the historic struggle which gave Madison Square Garden its great day. Weary, but smiling and exuding optimism of a November success, the phalanx of delegates, alternates and advisers started homeward.

The candidates themselves, after a day of consultation and greetings, during which the presidential nominees was introduced to his running mate for the first time, prepared for a brief spell of organized and intensive rest.

Nominees Go Home.

John W. Davis, already committed to a campaign "direct to the country," returned to his home at Locust Valley, L. I., with definite plans only for rest. Governor Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska, prepared to return to Lincoln, planning to stop off at Chicago for a conference with middle western leaders in the party.

Following the suggestion of Mr.

HIKE IN GASOLINE PRICE EXPECTED

Increase in Charge for Books Is First Indication of Restoration of Former Price.

Restoration of the price of gasoline in Atlanta to the 26-cent level probably will go into effect within two weeks, it was learned Thursday night.

The first indication of the probable increase came earlier in the day when the cash price of gas books was boosted from $8.10, for $10 quantity of gasoline, to $8.90 and the credit price from $8.33 to $9.17. This significant step was interpreted to be preparatory to an increase of the retail price generally.

Gasoline officials, who were consulted on the matter, stated that in their opinion the next two weeks would bring the 2-cent increase. Retail price of gas was reduced from 26 to 24 cents a gallon several weeks ago, when the major companies met the slashes of independent vendors. For a while it was thought that a gasoline war would be the outcome as company after company met competition. This was averted, however, when reductions stopped suddenly. It is now understood that all Atlanta gas companies will lift the price at the same time.

MUTINOUS FORCES IN FULL CONTROL OF STATE CAPITAL

Censored Dispatches of Government Deny Private Reports and Assert Rebellion Suppressed.

DEAD AND WOUNDED LINE CITY'S STREETS

Sao Paulo Governor Is Said To Be Fugitive From Seat of State Government There.

BY MORGAN EASTERLING.

Buenos Aires, July 10.—Brazilian revolutionists at Sao Paulo have deposed the Sao Paulo state government and a rebel force, headed by Juan Francisco, is marching on Parana, hoping to unite with rebel groups there, according to dispatches from Port Alegre, Brazil.

These dispatches, which are not confirmed, state that the Sao Paulo revolutionists plan to invade other states if they can join the Parana forces.

State troops are being concentrated at Port Alegre, prepared to march at a moment's notice, the dispatches report.

Buenos Aires, July 10.—While censored dispatches from Brazil report that the government is dominating the Sao Paulo rebellion, private and unconfirmed messages state that the mutinous army forces are in complete control of the state capital of Sao Paulo, and that more units are joining the rebels.

Observers here believe that the government forces probably are getting the situation under control slowly, but that the rebels are putting up a tenacious struggle.

Dead and wounded lie everywhere about the streets of Sao Paulo, according to private dispatches, and shortage of food is beginning to be felt in the city.

Plebs Up Governor.

A Frenchman, arriving by motor at Santos, says that he met a person whom he believed to be the Sao Paulo governor walking along the road, and gave him a lift toward Santos. Other reports say that the governor is a prisoner of the rebels.

It also is stated that the seat of government of the Sao Paulo district may be transferred to Santos. This would explain the official announcement that Admiral Penido has been appointed civil and military governor of the zone.

Army reserves in Santos are being called out, but it is said that they are not eager to fight. Three federal battleships are now at Santos, and about 200 marines from those ships left Santos for Sao Paulo Wednesday. No word has been received as yet as to whether they have gotten into action.

Reports from Santos state that about 500 people have arrived there by motor from Sao Paulo. They are presumed to be refugees. Dispatches

SECRETARY HUGHES CHOSEN BAR HEAD

Philadelphia, July 10.—Election of officers, including Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes as president, and the adoption of a resolution urging congress to change the date of the presidential inauguration from March 4 to the third Monday in January, featured the closing session today of the annual convention of the American Bar association.

The resolution, submitted by William L. Putnam, of Boston, would have United States senators and representatives take office the first Monday in January. In discussing the resolution before its adoption, William C. Coleman, of Baltimore, said the members of the bar association believed the president should take office as soon after his election as possible and that by moving the inauguration dates of members of congress back to the first Monday in January "would give them more time to carry out the nation's business."

Charles Henry Butler, of Washington, chairman of the committee on federal taxation, told the convention that his committee had succeeded in getting congress to pass a law protecting the rights of persons who filed waivers with the commissioner of internal revenue on assessment of income taxes. The new law, in return for the waiver, he said, grants taxpayers an extension of time for the filing of claims of corrections to their tax returns.

Reginald H. Smith, Boston, reported that the committee on legal aid had drafted a model "poor litigant" statute, providing a substitute for the various state laws designed to assist the poor man who could not bring suit, and therefore could not enjoy complete equality before the law, if he were forced to pay in full the customary fees and charges.

The annual banquet of the association was held tonight, the speakers including Robert von Moschizker, chief justice of Pennsylvania; George B. Rose, of Arkansas, and Stone Davours, of Mississippi. Robert E. Lee, of Dallas, Texas, retiring president, presided.

A telegram expressing regret that he could not accompany the members of the association on their trip to London from chief justice Taft was read by Mr. Saner.

"I regard the meeting in London as most important in strengthening the bond between the two great English-speaking countries," said the message. "May all our members renew their devotion to the free representative institution of the common law in the hospitable environment of Westminster Hall and the Inns of court."

"WHITE" INDIANS PROBABLY ALBINOS THINKS SCIENTIST

Chicago, July 10.—A white race exposed for generations to the sun would turn dark or black, Dr. Fay Cooper Cole, assistant professor of anthropology at the University of Chicago, said today in commenting upon the white Indians recently brought out of Panama by the Marsh-Darwin expedition. He conjectures that they probably are Albinos.

"Of course, not having seen the individuals, we can only guess as to what they are," he said. "However, we do not know of white races remaining such in the tropics for many generations."

The Hindu is a white race, he went on, but by being exposed to the short rays of the sun it has in many cases produced individuals blacker than some of the negro tribes of Africa.

MAN IS CRUSHED BETWEEN WAGON AND FREIGHT CAR

Crushed between the rear end of a wagon and a freight car, Alex Dennis, 60, of 208 Bellwood avenue, Thursday afternoon was rushed to the Grady hospital in a serious condition. X-ray examinations disclosed four broken ribs, and surgeons expressed the fear that Dennis might be hurt internally.

According to information given hospital attendants, Dennis was standing beside a mule cart in the Central of Georgia railroad yard, just off of East Hunter street, when the horse hitched to a wagon belonging to a Mr. Carmichael became frightened and backed the wagon against the freight car. Dennis was jammed between the rear end of the wagon and the car.

Seven-year-old Henry Grady Eaker, of 190 1/2 street, was treated at the Grady hospital Thursday evening for a broken nose and other injuries which he received in a fall from a swing in Maddox park, he told doctors.

As relief to the unemployment situation of London, it has been proposed that improvements be made to the water system at a cost of more than $300,000.

Davis Good Student And Very Popular As Law Professor

New York, July 10.—Twenty-seven years ago a young Clarksburg, W. Va., lawyer, John W. Davis, was elected a professor of law in the Washington and Lee university at Lexington, Va.

He was chosen not because of his reputation as a practicing lawyer—he had been practicing only a short time—but because he had won the reputation of having been perhaps the best law student who had ever attended Washington and Lee, the institution famous throughout the south as the university founded by George Washington and resurrected following the ravages of the civil war by Robert E. Lee.

M. Davis, who as a student first in the academic department and subsequently in the school of law, had spent seven years in the historic school, returned as a professor. Among his seniors in the law faculty were the late John Randolph Tucker, the war-time attorney general of Virginia, and Charles A. Graves, now a distinguished member of the faculty of the University of Virginia. Mr. Davis' classes included in his first two years of the university perhaps scores of students whose hardest job it was not to call him "John."

Mr. Davis was a success from the start. It is recalled that on one occasion Mr. Tucker, in conversation with a few of his friends, characterized Mr. Davis as a "home lawyer" and as a man whose advancement in life would be rapid.

The students under Mr. Davis were not long in recognizing the fact that the trustees knew what they were doing when they elected him. From the start the youthful professor was popular and before his first term was ended he would have run any of his faculty colleagues a close race in any popularity contest.

In those days Mr. Davis looked the young he was. His hair was black and he was as straight as an Indian. He had a wonderful faculty of expressing himself in a few words and in language even the dullard could understand.

With it all, he was the soul of courtesy and good nature. He loved a joke and he never was able to keep a straight face when information of the pranks of some of his students was brought to his attention. He was a bachelor then and when outside the class room joined with the students in the social activities of town and campus.

Mr. Davis is the first Washington and Lee man to be nominated for the presidency.

Presbyterians Even With Episcopalians If Davis Is Winner

New York, July 10.—If John W. Davis, the Presbyterian president of the United States, that would bring the number of such presidents even with the number who have been common to the Protestant Episcopal church, the latter at present holding the palm with eight presidents.

Mr. Davis is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church, and Mr. Davis attends Sunday morning services with her in the Church of St. John of Lattinwood, at Locust Valley, the rector of which is the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Hinton.

Few of the intimate friends of the Davises were happier yesterday at the outcome of the convention than Dr. Hinton. He sent Mr. Davis this telegram:

"Sincere congratulations. I had faith that you would be nominated, and it is strong for your election."

Charles G. Dawes, republican candidate for vice president, attends the First Presbyterian church in Evanston, Ill., of which the Rev. Dr. Hughes Elmer Brown is pastor. Mrs. Dawes is a member of this church.

President Coolidge united with the First Presbyterian church in Washington last October. He is the first Presbyterian president.

Warren G. Harding was the first Baptist president.

Resides Grover Cleveland, the Presbyterian presidents were: Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Lincoln, Abraham Lincoln did not unite with the church, but during the years he was in Washington he was a regular attendant at the New York Avenue Presbyterian church.

The Episcopal presidents were: Washington, Madison, Monroe, William Henry Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, Pierce and Arthur.

The Unitarians were: John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Fillmore and Taft.

The Methodist presidents were: Johnson, Grant, Hayes and McKinley. Van Buren and Roosevelt were members of the Dutch Reformed church. Garfield was a member of the Church of the Disciples of Christ. Jefferson was a Liberal.

LACK OF SOCIAL LIFE DRIVES GIRL TO DRINK POISON

Despondent, police say, because her father would not permit her to go to shows at night, 16-year-old Hattie Mae Wilson, daughter of J. E. Wilson, 172 Mills street, Thursday evening attempted to end her own life by drinking iodine.

She was alone at home at the time she drank the poison. She was found convulsed with pain by a neighbor who lives across the street, who summoned the Grady ambulance.

"I just feel that I am in the way here. My father will not allow me to go to shows at night like other girls, and he won't let me go anywhere—not even to Sunday school entertainments at nights," the girl sobbed as doctors worked energetically to save her life.

Doctors expressed the belief that she would suffer no dangerous effects from the poison.

EUGENIC MEASURE TO INCLUDE BOTH BRIDE AND GROOM

An amendment to a senate bill passed last year, requiring a man applying for a marriage license to show a certificate of health, was voted by the house committee on hygiene and sanitation at a meeting held Thursday afternoon. The amendment substitutes the word "person" for the word "man" in the bill, thus making the health certificate provision apply to both sexes.

Atlanta Woman Describes WAS FREQUENT VISITOR AT OLD "SWIMMING HOLE" Boyhood Days of J. W. Davis

An intimate sketch of the life of John W. Davis, presidential nominee of the democratic party, from boyhood days in Clarksburg, W. Va., to his present position as one of the nation's most eminent lawyers, as seen through the eyes of a life-long friend, was related Thursday by Mrs. M. S. Jarvis, wife of Colonel M. S. Jarvis, who is in charge of national guard affairs of the Fourth corps area, stationed at Fort McPherson.

Mrs. Jarvis, who was born and reared in Clarksburg, resided only a few blocks from the Davis home, and during her childhood was a playmate of the nominee. As they grew older a "brother-and-sister" friendship between them ripened, and continued until their paths separated when Mrs. Jarvis married and Davis left Clarksburg for Washington following his election to congress. Mrs. Jarvis since then has followed Davis' career closely, and correspondence between them has been continued through the years.

Was Great Student.

The democratic standard bearer is a son of the late John J. Davis, one of West Virginia's most prominent attorneys and a man who was active in democratic circles of the state. Although a normal American boy in every way, John W. Davis, during his childhood, was a precocious youth and a great student. He did not spend his entire time poring over thick and ponderous volumes, but he did read and study more than the average youngster. He was interested in athletics, played tennis well, and was a frequent visitor at the "swimming hole" in the creek near Clarksburg.

He received his early education from his mother, a brilliant and talented woman, and after a course at a private preparatory school, entered Washington and Lee university. Following his graduation from Washington and Lee, he served for a short while as assistant professor of law at that institution.

Momentous Decision.

One of the most momentous decisions in Davis' life, and one which pointed in his career, was made in the spring of 1899, when he was offered the position of professor of law at Washington and Lee. At that time, he was only 23 years of age, and had not fully decided whether to practice or teach law. His father wished him to cast his lot with the elder Davis' law firm, but Davis' law firm had enjoyed lecturing, and had a real desire to accept the position at Washington and Lee.

As an additional argument in favor of acceptance of the position, Davis was planning to marry within a short time, and the position would have assured him a regular income, a very essential factor at that stage of his life.

He sought the counsel of Mrs. Jarvis, who describes his final decision in the matter in this way:

"We walked out to the edge of town on the night he made his decision, discussing the matter from every angle, and attempting to decide what was best for his future. At that time, the town was not as large as now, as Clarksburg was a town of 5,000, whereas it now boasts a population of more than 25,000. After talking the matter over thoroughly, John decided that 'once a professor, always a professor,' and realized that his father's law office offered better opportunities than the Washington and Lee position."

Successful as Lawyer.

He was successful as a lawyer from the start, making a name for himself throughout the state, and taking over much of his father's work while still a young man. He left Clarksburg when elected to congress in 1910, but retained his law affiliations in West Virginia, and in 1912, when he was elected to congress, he resigned from the house to accept the position of solicitor general.

Since Davis left Clarksburg, the law firm of Davis & Clark has become Steptoe & Johnson, Philip Steptoe and Louis A. Johnson having been members of the firm several years before that time.

Davis retains his residence in Clarksburg, and votes there, although he has resided in New York city since he returned from England, where he had served as ambassador.

Modest in Success.

Davis is described by Mrs. Jarvis as "an outstanding character, and a man who inspires confidence in all who know him. He is loyal to the core, and never entertained a dishonest thought or countenanced a dishonest act," she said. She added that his success in life has been taken with extreme modesty, and that no matter what his position or what the circumstances are, he never forgets old friends.

Davis lacks the "log cabin atmosphere" so often surrounding great men. Reared in the atmosphere of refinement, he was afforded every opportunity for education. His father, while not wealthy, was well-to-do, and had established a reputation as one of the greatest lawyers of the state. His mother was one of the most charming and brilliant women of the state, and the Davis home was the center of intellectual and educational affairs among women of that part of the state. Mrs. Davis, although a slight, frail woman, was active in the organization of numerous educational and Bible clubs. His father was active in the councils of the southern Presbyterian church.

Another of Davis' leading attorneys, John Bassel, a strange coincidence is that in practically all of the large number of cases in which Bassel and John J. Davis were retained, they were on opposite sides.

Of Davis' three sisters, Miss Julia Davis is the only one now residing in Clarksburg. She lives at the old family home in that city. Like her mother, she is active in literary and church work, and was in charge of Red Cross work in West Virginia during the war. She is also interested in social welfare work, and has done many things to aid prisoners of the state.

Clarksburg has an added claim to fame in the fact that that city is the birthplace of Stonewall Jackson. Jackson was reared there, and resided in Clarksburg until he left to attend West Point.

Colonel Jarvis, who was also a schoolmate and life-long friend of the new democratic nominee, is widely known to Atlanta people, not only through his residence at Fort McPherson, but by reason of his having been twice in command of organizations in training at Camp Gordon during the world war period.

Madison Square Garden Converted To Swimming Pool

New York, July 10.—A great gap yawned in the floor of Madison Square Garden today—a pit that had been filled with clear, cool water. For the Garden was undergoing a transformation that will change it from a convention hall into an gigantic swimming pool, where 14,000 may be accommodated in a day.

It will remain so until Labor day. Then other threes will take place and it will emerge a hall for winter sports—boxing, circus shows and the like. And a year from next month, August of 1925, will come the passing of the Garden, when it will be torn down because of the march of commerce, to be replaced by an office building.

TYPHOID EPIDEMIC THREATENS ROME

Rome, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—Several new cases of typhoid fever have been reported in Rome during the last few days, according to Dr. B. V. Elmore, Floyd county commissioner of health. Dr. Elmore credits these to unsanitary conditions.

He states that precautions should be taken to protect the public from the disease. There are no charges for inoculations and if typhoid fever can be prevented this way everyone is urged to be inoculated at once, he stated tonight.

All efforts will be made to prevent an epidemic.

HARRIS IS THANKED FOR AID TO SALESMEN

Warm praise of Senator William J. Harris' record in the United States senate is contained in a letter received by the senator recently from A. M. Loeb, president of the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Association.

"We are especially grateful," the letter reads, "for your help in behalf of the measure for the repeal of the onerous and discriminatory Pullman surcharge, for which you introduced legislation which was unanimously passed by the senate."

"Unfortunately, in the intense scramble of the last few weeks this bill was held up in the house of representatives along with much other important unfinished business, such as emergency appropriation bills, etc. While the salesmen will not enjoy the hoped-for immediate elimination of this iniquitous 'tax' on travel until after congress reassembles, this delay does not in any manner diminish the thanks we all owe you and our other friends who joined with you in the passage of the bill through the senate."

The letter expressed the hope that Senator Harris would have no opposition for his seat in the senate and extended the "best wishes of traveling men of the nation" in his campaign for reelection.

Senator Harris will remain in Georgia for several weeks, he said Thursday, stopping at the Ansley hotel while here.

AFRAID OF GIRLS, DAVIS WAS SENT TO FEMALE SCHOOL

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 10.—Many school-day chums of John W. Davis, democratic nominee for the presidency, today found it hard to realize that the bashful youth of years gone by had risen to his present post in the public eye.

John's bashfulness as a boy, his friends said, led his parents to take extreme measures. His school chums, time and again, found John going out of his way to avoid meeting girl acquaintances. The parents approached Professor George Young, who conducted a preparatory school for girls here. By special permission, John and one other Clarksburg lad were admitted to the school. But even, this close contact with the girls failed to show an immediate effect, and it was not until he had completed his course of study that he lost his bashfulness.

A croquet set recently brought from England is priced at $80, and is guaranteed to last a lifetime.

OVER 40,000 ELKS PARADE IN BOSTON

Boston, July 10.—More than 40,000 members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, brilliant in many-colored costumes, parading behind two score bands, brought to a climax here today the 60th annual national convention of the order which opened Monday. A brief, but heavy thundershower, which brought relief from the heat, drove both paraders and spectators to cover, but the long line of march was taken up again as soon as the sun reappeared. Governor Channing H. Cox, Mayor James M. Curley and Grand Exalted Ruler John G. Price, of Columbus, Ohio, reviewed at different points the three-hour-long parade.

Heat and high humidity brought about the prostration of about 30 persons, none of whom, however, was seriously affected, the police reported. Nearly a score received slight injuries when spectators assembled in grandstands along the Boston common, crowded the aisles, tripping in the crush when the thunderstorm broke.

Drill teams in multi-colored uniforms preceded many of the parade groups. Historical floats broke in many places the long line of marchers. The Jackson (Mich.) drill team, five successive times winners of the national Elk drill trophy, in red fezzes and jackets and blue pants, stood out prominently with well executed maneuvers.

Three live elk in a motor truck cage accompanied a small band of Idaho paraders. The Philadelphia lodges, headed by their officers on horseback, reproduced the New Year carnival of their city.

Cambridge Elks, 1,500 strong, in purple caps and gowns, marched behind a float that boasted of Harvard, Radcliffe and other educational institutions within the city limits. Near in line were a small group from Panama in white, with white helmets, and the contingent from Portland, Ore., in purple uniforms cut in the fashion of the Canadian mounted police. Zouave uniforms with every possible color combination featured many units. Texans in sombreros and chaps marched between Gloucester fishermen and colonial troops with three-cornered hats, long swallow-tail coats, and knee breeches.

Georgians Will Participate In National "Defense Test"

Georgia will play a conspicuous part in "national defense test" on September 12, the sixth anniversary of the battle of St. Mihiel. This much became certain Thursday when Governor Clifford Walker issued a proclamation calling attention to the "test" which will be in the nature of a general mobilization of all military forces under the flag of the United States.

Patriotic ceremonies, military parades, field maneuvers and drills will be executed throughout the nation in celebration of the anniversary of the beginning of the battle of St. Mihiel, one of the most important engagements in the annals of military history. National guard and other organizations of a similar nature will be called into service for the brief period of one day and the entire nation will be in the throes of a regular "mobilization." It is not only a nation-wide celebration of a great military achievement in which the United States participated, but will be in the nature of a "test" to demonstrate the rapidity with which the defense of the nation could get into actual service in event of an emergency.

Adjutant General Charles H. Cox, of Georgia, will be in general charge of arrangements in Georgia, and stated Thursday that plans are going forward rapidly with a view to eliminating every obstacle which might retard or hinder prompt "mobilization" of the state's national guard.

Governor's Proclamation.
The text of the governor's proclamation follows:
Whereas the president has approved the holding of a defense test within the continental limits of the United States on September 12, 1924, the sixth anniversary of our great victory at the battle of St. Mihiel, I, Clifford Walker, governor of the state of Georgia, do call upon every man, every citizen, every patriotic organization and all true Americans, whether male or female, of the state of Georgia to lend every effort and assist in every way possible to make this occasion a marked success.

I have the honor to quote from an article by Major General David C. Shanks, commander of the Fourth corps area, on this subject:
"On September 12, 1924, at a late hour in the afternoon it is proposed to have in each community where there is established a national guard or an organized reserve organization, a national defense test. The object of this test is to enable us to see how the mechanism for our national defense would work in actual operation. It is the effort of a free country to provide in advance for its own safety. This test will afford an opportunity for each community to give evidence of its patriotism. It is to be entirely local, entirely voluntary, and without expense to the government. The defense test has a twofold object: to enable us to see whether any changes or modifications in existing plans are necessary or desirable; its second and more important object is to keep alive the national spirit of patriotism, which has been our principal asset during the last great war, and will enable everyone to learn his place and position in the defense of the country, since our security be threatened. America can never be better so long as the spirit of patriotism is maintained throughout our land. This defense test will be a success in exact proportion as our people lend their influence and their aid to it."

As a part of the ceremony, it is proposed to include patriotic music, an invocation for the continuance and prosperity of the nation, and a patriotic address by a selected speaker whose theme will be along the lines of the clause of the preamble to the constitution of the United States: "to provide for the common defense."
It is recommended that patriotic assemblies, parades of local units of the national guard, civic and veterans societies, reserve officers' training corps, schools, etc., be held in each locality these to be conducted under the auspices and management of local committees to be

MISTAH SPEAKAH

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Mistah Speakah—
The gentleman from Alabama street—

Without any intent to assume any other than strictly neutral attitude on the question, there was one thought which unavoidably responded to a couple of speeches made in the constitutional amendments committee on Thursday afternoon.

Both gentlemen were opposing the measure to make the terms of office of state officers four years, instead of two.

One gentleman devoted a large portion of his speech to George Washington and Thomas Jefferson and the framers of both constitutions—national and state.

The other went back to the French revolution for his illustration and drew a vivid picture of the first meetings of the third estate in 1789—or thereabouts.

And the thought came, unbidden—
Why worry these worthy ancestors, long at rest from political and all other troubles, with proposals to amend our constitution today? Doesn't the state's organic law provide that people of today shall vote upon all proposals to amend that constitution? Then why not let the people of today decide today's issues, and leave these mighty men of old to worry over the problems facing them in whatever sphere of spiritual existence they now inhabit?

However, inasmuch as all the ancient worthies long since bowed to life's last adjournment—
Move we adjourn until tomorrow—

NO CHANGE SEEN IN TEMPERATURE FOR CITY TODAY

No change in weather conditions for today was forecast at the local office of the United States bureau Thursday, indicating that the quick-change complexion of the elements would continue to prevail.

It will be thundershowers, sunbursts and breezes from dawn to dark, and after dark.

Temperature Thursday reached a high point of 82 degrees in the early afternoon. Heat conditions will be about the same today.

Just how long the elements will continue to play tag with each other before they settle down to a steady diet either of rain or sun was not made public at the weather office. Not for several days, probably, it was indicated.

UPSHAW PLEASSED AT PARTY TICKET

Washington, July 10.—(Special.) Congressman W. D. Upshaw, returning from the national democratic convention, declared that he is "highly pleased with the splendid statement of John W. Davis, and believes that Governor Charles W. Bryan makes his strongest possible running mate to save the west from Coolidge and La Follette."

He sent to the nominee the following telegram:
"Hon. John W. Davis, democratic presidential nominee: Heartily congratulations to the colleague of my brilliant boyhood friend, Walter McElreath. Command my services anytime, anywhere. God bless you with victory."

CRITICAL ILLNESS OF GOMPERS DENIED

New York, July 10.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is at the Hotel Shelburne, Coney Island, to get the advantage of the salt air and rest, and is in no danger of a serious illness, said W. G. Roberts, chairman of the federation's legislative committee, tonight.

"Mr. Gompers attended two conferences today," said Mr. Roberts, "and came here upon the advice of his physician to get the benefit of the salt air. He has had a nurse ever since he was at Lenox Hill hospital, where he went some weeks ago for treatment for a general breakdown. There is nothing alarming in his condition."

Mr. Gompers is 74 years old and has been president of the federation since 1892.

Resolution on School Book Purchase Called "Ungracious Action"

"A most ungracious action" was Alderman J. R. Bachman's comment Thursday on the board of education resolution Tuesday "putting council on notice" that it would have to provide funds for purchase of text-books for free distribution in fifth and sixth grades this year.

The alderman, who is chairman of the finance committee of council, confirmed statements made by other members of the committee Wednesday that the money would be provided in the same way as during the past two years.

He pointed out that council not only has made special appropriations during each of the last two years for buying text-books but has made other special appropriations to assist the school board during the period, one for starting work on Girls' High school last year, without which the building could not have been started, and one of $300,000 in addition to the regular school appropriation this year to prevent schools from shutting down in September.

New Cabinet Daughter Lands In Capital and Looks It Over

MISS EDNA WILBUR ON LEAVE FROM HER JOB

Washington, July 10.—Washington's newest cabinet daughter has been spending her first few days in the capital just like anybody's daughter here on an excursion trip—sight-seeing.

Miss Edna Wilbur, whose father is secretary of the navy, arrived last Thursday from California. She came through the Panama canal with her brother, Leonard Wilbur, and then to the Chesapeake bay and the Potomac from Hampton Roads, on the neat little yacht Sylph, which is at her father's disposal as boss of the navy. Mrs. Wilbur met her son and daughter at Hampton Roads, the secretary being away on a speaking trip.

Since Thursday Miss Wilbur has been spending most of her time doing the capital, Mount Vernon and other local points of national interest, particularly the Washington monument and Lincoln memorial. She casts her vote for the Washington monument as the capital's most impressive sight, with the memorial a close second.

Miss Wilbur is Washington's third cabinet daughter of marriageable or debutante age. But the other two aren't having hot weather here. Miss Ailsa Mellon is on the Atlantic, having sailed Saturday with her father, the secretary of the treasury, and brother, Paul Mellon, for Europe. Miss Ruth Wallace is in the west, having gone there with her mother when congress adjourned the first week in June.

Miss Elizabeth Hughes, a fourth cabinet daughter and still in the debut class, is leaving this week for Summerville, N. J., to stay with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Lockhart Wadwell.

Next month Mrs. Wilbur and her son and daughter will go to Contoocook, N. H., to visit Rear Admiral and Mrs. Guy H. Burrage at their farm near Contoocook.

She will stay with her parents here until January, and then will go to Europe for the spring months. Meanwhile, she says she hasn't bought any expensive new clothes for her descent upon Washington, and isn't making any extensive social plans for the winter. But with her father at the head of a department full of eligible young officers, she oughtn't to have many dull evenings.

And—no, her hair is not bobbed!

going away delighted with his management of the convention."

Senator Swanson, of Virginia, on behalf of senatorial friends, described Mr. Hull as one of the "most efficient and unselfish public servants" he knew.

Post when it was recognized as this country's leading liberal journal, and now editor of "The Nation," referred to Mr. Erwin as "an amazing young Georgian." Commenting on Mr. Erwin's part in the convention he said in the current issue of the magazine.

"This amazing young Georgian evoked the most spontaneous and enthusiastic ovation of the convention. Like all American crowds, it applauded a brave man as he deserved to be cheered. For once, some of the standards were 'trooped' to a good purpose, a worthwhile parade was formed, and the audience let itself loose."

Descendant of Fighters

Mr. Erwin descends from a long line of fighters and statesmen. His grandfather, General Howell Cobb, was attorney general of the United States, a member of Buchanan's cabinet and a general in the Confederate army. General T. R. R. Cobb, another conspicuous figure in the affairs of the nation and the Confederacy, was an uncle. His father, Captain Alexander S. Erwin, entered the Confederate army at the age of 17 as a lieutenant and came out at the end of the war a captain. He was later one of Athens' leading attorneys. Captain Erwin's widow, Andrew Erwin's mother, now living, is the originator of the idea of awarding crosses of honor to Confederate soldiers or their descendants. Her plan was adopted by the Daughters of the Confederacy, and she was awarded the first one given by that organization.

Mr. Erwin was one of the original McAdoo men of Georgia, and was chairman of the eighth congressional district McAdoo committee. After the primary he registered a kick at the method by which delegates to the state convention were chosen; fought the plan to do away with district caucuses; won the fight, and then later, after the Georgia delegation had arrived in New York and caucused on the question of voting as a unit on every issue to come up, he served notice that he considered himself bound by no instructions from the convention other than to vote for McAdoo, which he loyally intended to do.

"On other questions I expect to vote as I believe the people of my district would wish me to vote," he stated.

He took a stand for democratic ideas that he had acquired from his conception of democracy and the ideals that came down to him through ancestors who were prominent in the liberations of the country at even a more trying time than now, and when men spoke out fearlessly and were not hindered in speech or actions through fear of political consequences.

Mr. Erwin has been honored by his fellow citizens with the mayoralship of Athens, the only political office he has ever held—and this unsought—for two terms, and when he returns home his friends will let him know that they are proud of him not so much for the prominence he gained for himself and this city at the convention, but for having convictions and fearlessly speaking them. He is expected here some day this week.

POLICE INVESTIGATING INJURY TO SUPERVISOR

Police Thursday were probing the accident that resulted in the injury Wednesday evening of Jesse Holbrook, supervisor for the Georgia Railway & Power company, stationed at Gordon avenue and Lee street.

Supervisor Holbrook was on duty at the time he was hurt. The automobile that injured him was operated by R. L. Tomlinson, 57 Rose Circle.

The accident was witnessed by a number of people, who rushed to Holbrook's assistance. He was given first aid treatment in a nearby drug store and pushed to the Atlanta hospital. Doctors stated that his injuries are not of a dangerous nature.

Another victim of auto mishaps reported to the police Thursday was Fannie McBrooks, negro woman, who was struck down by an auto as she crossed Whitehall street behind a street car from which she had just alighted, according to the report of Officer A. L. Allen.

The automobile was driven by Fred Giles, of 37 Gordon street. No case was made by Officer Allen, who was told the accident could not have been avoided by the motorist.

In the only cases in which drivers were found guilty in recorder's court Thursday, J. W. Rustin, 24 of Danville, Va., was fined $11 on a charge of reckless driving, and J. T. Mikrut, 30, was fined $26 for speeding. Three cases were dismissed.

CAUGHT IN TRAFFIC NET BOYKIN PRAISES POLICE

Mrs. John A. Boykin, of 280 Myrtle street, wife of the solicitor general, was arrested Thursday night on a charge of violating the dinner ordinance. Mr. Boykin, who was in the machine with his wife, praised the police for their vigilance in making the arrest.

Captain Grover C. Fain and Lieutenant L. E. Shumate, while inspecting men on the beats on Stewart and Georgia avenues and Lee street Thursday night, booked 28 cases for violating the dinner ordinance. The largest number of new cases made for breaking traffic laws in several weeks was recorded during the night. Cases were still being docketed early this morning.

MAJOR MEASURES TABLED IN SENATE

The Georgia senate will meet this morning with a clean calendar, as far as important legislation is concerned, the only business in sight being several local and minor bills which are ready for consideration.

The two major measures—the Atlanta viaduct bill and the proposal to repeal the tax equalization law—which have been facing the upper house this session, were disposed of, for the time being, at least, at Thursday's session, when both measures were tabled.

After the senate had voted 19 to 13 to adopt the committee's favorable report on the viaduct bill Thursday, the measure was tabled on motion of Senator Smith, of the 35th district. The senator stated that, in view of the fact that only 32 members of the senate were present, friends of the measure did not think it wise to have action taken on it at present. The bill, which was passed by the lower house last session, calls for amendment to the charter of Atlanta to permit construction of viaducts over the railroad tracks at Pryor street and Central avenue.

Tax Equalization Law Tabled.
The proposal to repeal the tax equalization law, which is a senate substitute bill, was tabled on motion of Senator Stovall, of the 29th district, one of its authors, who stated that the parliamentary situation is such at this time that passage of the repeal bill by substitute as recommended would result in no progress this session. He advocated bringing before the upper house the original house tax equalization law repeal measure, which was passed by the lower body last session.

The senate finance committee, in whose hands the house measure has been, voted to report unfavorably the tax repeal bill to the upper house. The meeting of the committee was held directly following adjournment of the regular session.

Senator Henderson, of the 52d district, moved to reconsider action by the senate in passing the bill authorizing electric street, suburban or inter-urban railway companies to acquire certificates of indebtedness of corporations operating motor buses or trackless trolleys. The senator said the bill seemed to give too much power to the railway companies and that he would like to have the senate give the bill more thorough consideration. His motion was lost.

Crop Lien Bill Cleared Up.
The senate concurred in a house amendment more clearly setting forth provisions of a measure to allow mortgaging of crops, not yet planted or actually growing. The bill provides that a lien may be taken to provide supplies for planting in the same calendar year in which the crops are to be grown.

A bill introduced by Senator Phillips, of the 18th district, authorizing counties of the state to appropriate money for public libraries, was passed by a vote of 31 to 4. The senator urged passage of the measure, emphasizing the need of good books for children in the rural districts.

The committee appointed to visit the tuberculosis sanitarium at Alto reported Thursday it had visited the sanitarium June 14, and that 491 patients are well pleased. The superintendent and his staff were commended by the committee for their operation of the institution.

The sub-committee on schools at Cave Springs, appointed last session, reported that the schools were in reported June 24, and satisfactory information was obtained from teachers and trustees with regard to educational work.

The committee recommended repairs to the buildings. The senate passed the following bills at Thursday's session:

By Senator Adams, of the 47th district: To appropriate $2,000 to the Georgia Training school to build a barn.

By Senator King, of the 11th district: To create a city court at Fort Gaines.

House bill No. 626: To amend the act incorporating the town of Dahlonega to provide permanent registration of voters.

House bill No. 612: To abolish the office of county treasurer of Muscogee county.

House bill No. 26: To amend the Georgia code relative to the execution of deeds.

New Bills Introduced.
The following new bills were introduced:

By Senator Arnow, of the 4th district: To amend the constitution to authorize the city of Brunswick to increase its indebtedness up to 14 per cent of the assessed value of taxable property.

By Senator Stovall, of the 29th district: To extend the time for filing demurrers to pleas in several courts.

By Senator Storall: To define vagrancy and prohibit its advertisement and misbranding.

By Senators Phillips, Lankford and King: To amend paragraphs 8 and 9, section 2, article 6 of the constitution.

By Senator Mundy, of the 38th district: Fixing assessed value of the forest land in the state.

By Senator Beauchamp and Redwine: To amend the Parks code.

By Senator Redwin, of the 26th district: To amend the act regulating banking.

DAVIS ESCAPES SIEGE OF GOTHAM

New York, July 10.—After a crowded day, during which he surrounded good-naturedly to a throng of admirers and photographers who besieged him repeatedly at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president, tonight escaped from an inundation of congratulatory telegrams, had a conference for about an hour with Charles W. Bryan, his running mate, and William Jennings Bryan, and prepared to go to his country home at Locust Valley, Long Island, for a brief rest before taking up detailed plans for his campaign.

William J. Bryan, when he left Mr. Davis, was asked if he would take an active part in the campaign and said, "I will help if I can after I have had a rest."

When Mr. Bryan, who had opposed Mr. Davis' nomination, met the nominee in a corridor of the hotel immediately after Mr. Davis' meeting with newspapermen this morning, Mr. Bryan held out his hand, smiled and said:

"I am at your command."

Receives Many Callers.
The nominee went to the home of Frank L. Polk, former under-secretary of state, and spent the afternoon receiving callers, and answering some of the messages that had poured upon him. Among the callers were Thomas L. Chabourne, of New York, one of the chief supporters of William G. McAdoo's candidacy during the convention; J. Y. Sanders, former governor of Louisiana; Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of Governor Smith's campaign manager; Clam Shaver, of Clarksburg, W. Va., manager of Mr. Davis' pre-convention campaign; and George White, of Ohio, former chairman of the democratic national convention.

In conversation with the correspondents, Mr. Davis did not discuss any of the issues of the campaign, excepting that because of the burial of President Coolidge's son today, he preferred not "to get into the papers" much. He said that he hoped to take a rest in the country, but that beyond that his plans were indefinite.

In the flood of telegrams which four stenographers at the Polk home sorted was one from Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, expressing the conviction that in the democratic presidential nomination "the things Mr. Wilson fought for will have a worthy champion."

"Heartfelt congratulations to you and the party," the telegram began, and "congratulations to Mrs. Davis," it concluded.

Mr. Davis promptly dispatched to Mrs. Wilson at Washington this message:

"Your message was most gratifying and touched me deeply. Permit me to convey to you my very warm and heartfelt thanks for your congratulations on my nomination."

"I sincerely hope that I may be able to give you the confidence you express and that the great principles and purposes for which Mr. Wilson so valiantly fought may further triumph at the coming election. Mrs. Davis joins me in thanks for your message."

In reply to the brief "Please accept my congratulations on your nomination," conveyed from William Gibbs McAdoo to Mr. Davis last night, the nominee today sent Mr. McAdoo this telegram:

"Thanks for your message of congratulations. I have profound confidence in the ultimate success of liberalism and democracy."

A "bodyguard extraordinary" was attached to Mr. Davis today in the person of Mr. Big Ben Nye, who was New York city's official escort for European notables visiting here during and since the world war. This gives the nominee three henchmen, a captain of the bomb squad and a police detective having been assigned as his bodyguard by Police Commissioner Enright.

FOREST FIRES SWEEP TIMBER IN MONTANA

Butte, Mont., July 10.—One thousand acres of valuable timber have been destroyed in 29 hours by a fire raging six miles from Missoula, officials of the forest service said here Thursday night. The fire is advancing in the direction of the town.

Another fire is blazing in the Bear Creek area of the almost inaccessible Nez Perce forest, it was announced. Several smaller fires were reported from various parts of the Pend Oreille forest, and several other fires considered the situation dangerous.

HE THAT LOVETH SILVER

shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity. When goods increase, they are increased that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?—Ecclesiastes 3:10, 11.

THE WEATHER SERVICE.

Perhaps few people realize that, in all its predictions, the national weather service is 88 per cent right. Yet these figures are said to be established by long observation and careful verification in the five districts in which the territory of the United States is divided for meteorological purposes. Since there are few human undertakings which can score 100 per cent success, the weather bureau may be said to have made quite a creditable showing since its establishment in 1870.

Before that time practically nothing was known of the applied science of meteorology, and farming, travel and other forms of endeavor proceeded by the old haphazard plan which had been followed since the beginning of human life upon the earth. The United States weather bureau came into being as an insignificant branch of the army signal corps. Its equipment was crude and limited, its workers, with practically no data to guide them, faced many difficulties and made numerous mistakes, but by patience and fidelity to the task, slowly found the road which led to the success of today. Says a recent writer on this subject:

"It is doubtful whether the pioneers realized the practical value of their science. They could hardly foresee the day when forecasts, storm warnings and the daily weather map would be closely involved with transportation, industry and agriculture. To the safe and economical operation of railroads the weather service contributes its share; owners of motor truck fleets demand weather reports, so do shipmasters and fishermen; the air mail and aviators in general are assured a greater percentage of safety by a foreknowledge of flying conditions, while the farmer, ever fearful of crop damage, looks to the bureau to afford him a measure of protection."

With the further development of the art of flying, the expansion of motor traffic and the intensified agriculture which the growth in population will demand, it will be seen that the weather service must become increasingly important.

THE JOY OF WORK.

Editor Townsend, of The Dahlonga (Ga.) Nugget, is undoubtedly one of the busiest weekly editors in the country—one who keeps "everlastingly at it" and finds joy in his work.

It is a rare thing for him to announce a holiday—except on Sundays and patriotic occasions; and then, they say, he makes up for "burning daylight" by sitting up nights with his excellent country newspaper, in which he gives subscribers and advertisers full value for their patronage.

Work pays him in health and happiness, as well as in his cash returns. He knows how to keep going and so he makes things "go!"

And, as ordinary of his country, he is known as a dispenser of happiness by issuing marriage licenses and performing the marriage ceremony for all who seek his services. He is an all-round perpetual motion man, with "Nothing Like Keeping Busy" as his motto.

He is such a worker as would have gratified the heart of old Ben Franklin, who said of his financial success in his little printing business, "I was seen in no idle places and I took a day off, it was with a book, or working for the advancement of my business."

Yes, the Georgia editor gets lot of enjoyment out of it all; for he is a philosopher, that takes the world as he finds it and makes the most and the best of life.

FRIENDS TO THE WEEVIL.

County correspondents of Georgia weekly newspapers—and even the editors themselves—have somewhat to say, in the way of advice, to the fishermen that locate their paradise on the river banks and in the sheltering shadows of the lakes "where the fish bite free."

The following editorial paragraph, which is from The Tifton (Ga.) Gazette, is a sample of what they are saying along this line—

"The man who sits on the river banks now and angles for catfish may be having more fun for the present than the man who is busy in his cottonfield putting out calcium arsenate, but when the time comes to gin and sell cotton, the man who is working now will be the one to smile then. The fish are great friends to the weevil."

That's putting it about right, as to the brethren of the fishing fraternity who angle at the expense of present and future prosperity.

The summer river banks of the idle ones are not those where the right sort of checks are cashed. But it is difficult to reform the fisherman who was born and raised that way.

The call of the river is ever the one he answers, with its winning word of—

"Fish, fish, fish!
And the line a-going 'Swish!'
Oh, the trout is such a beauty
When it's served up on the dish!"

Reform the fisherman? The task would be hopeless!

But he would be rendering valuable service to himself and others of the farming communities if he'd only catch the early weevils and use them for bait!

CHASING THE JONESES.

"We want to marry, but George just makes $150.00 a month and we can't afford it!"

This was the frank statement made recently by an Atlanta girl to her grandmother who lives in a small upstate village.

"You see," the girl went on, "the rent of a furnished apartment costs from $75.00 to $100.00, just one servant will cost $10.00 a week, groceries at least twice that amount, and you see there is nothing left for clothes and incidentals, such as shows, cigars and things like that; and we cannot have a car."

When the grandmother heard these figures she said:

"When I was married John and I lived for a few months in the home of his father. Then we set up housekeeping in one of the tenant houses on the farm, and everything we had in the house did not cost exceeding $25.00. I did all the cooking on an open fire—there were no stoves or sewing machines in our neighborhood then. We brought water from a spring two hundred yards away at the foot of a hill. I did all the sewing by hand, milked, churned, looked after the chickens and garden. In a few years I had several children to look after, but we got along very well."

We bought and paid for a farm and equipped it with buildings, sent the children to school, and kept pretty well out of debt. I did not go to any shows. I seldom went to church or to town. But my children have all managed to get along and some of them are regarded as highly successful."

The simple and heroic picture presented by the life of the grandmother, whose sons have become successful business men and leaders in various callings, presents a sharp contrast with the case of the girl who is afraid to marry on a salary of $150.00 a month.

It is true that the grandmother worked very hard and denied herself many enjoyments which are highly prized in our day, but she played her part in life's great drama well and made a most valuable contribution to the life of the race and the integrity of the social order of her time.

Since the days when it was considered stylish for the Egyptian maidens to carry little pet crocodiles in their shopping bags, the tyranny of custom has exerted a powerful influence on human conduct, and in our day keeping up with the Joneses—especially since the Joneses have access to high-powered cars and flying machines—is a rather strenuous business.

There is an inviting opportunity open to the girl who is brave enough, and heroic enough, to marry George, regardless of the size of his salary, and then help him save a part of it or find a better job.

The women convention delegates are there to say what they want, and to get it, too!

"Not an accident in Atlanta on Sunday." Where were the automobiles?

The hardest work certain congressmen have been doing this season is explaining why they didn't.

After many experiments, they have failed to invent the safety Fourth of July firecrackers.

Praying for rain is pretty hard work if the wind isn't blowing right.

Summer Night.
I love the darkness of night,
The trees against the sky,
The rustling of the summer breeze
Softly passing by.

II.
The fireflies flash gaily,
Brilliant gems of light,
Like those on hands of ladies fair,
In boxes opera night.

III.
The raindrops of the afternoon
Still cling to bush and tree,
The crickets and the katydids
Make sweetest melody.

IV.
The fragrance of the sweet tuberose
Floats upon the air,
The jasmine and heliotrope
Their presence, too, declare.

V.
But, oh, I love the summer night
That follows garish day,
It rests the very soul of earth
And helps us on the way.

Commenting on the story that an Australian preacher in London is trying to secure a single-sheet sermon for traveling use in his parish, The Tifton Gazette says:

Today's Talk

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON MAKING UP YOUR MIND.

Lincoln once said that he noticed that a man was usually about as happy as he made up his mind to be. Happiness may easily be made a habit.

Some of the happiest people I know are those with the most troubles. I recently spent an evening with one of the happiest men I know and I listened and was amazed at what he had to carry through each day. The things he had to face daily were not the things of the ordinary man. And yet he always shows a happy front.

Here was a man who had made up his mind to be happy. He was not a man who knew how to think they think they can, just the minute they decide that they will. This is a pretty good world, after all when you make up your mind that it is.

Making up your mind somehow clears away so much. The path before you then looks plain and not so rough. And it is half the battle won!

We are bodies of influence no matter where we go. And we give out invisible waves of good or bad feeling to all with whom we come in contact. If we are making up good thoughts in our mind and if we are hourly resolving toward better things, those waves we touch with our influence know it at once.

Make up your mind to be happy. Make up your mind to be the inevitable. Make up your mind to be good and to make the most of all that you have.

The Prodigal Son decided to arise and go to his father.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

New York, July 10.—Thoughts while strolling around New York: Girls with little tight skirts. Slinky frocks. Ash with silk. A good modiste can almost sanctify a saint. Solomon couldn't tell the paste jewels from the real.

A Greek meets a Greek. A new fruit stand in the making. That famous wit—Oliver Herford. The life of the Players. Crowds studying caskets in a show window. The clomp of a million feet. Bachelor club windows filled with expressionless faces.

Summer madness. Women with colored feather neckties. There's Big Bill Edwards. And his triple decker. Wish I could get fat. Impertinent rubber wagon barker. Harping, flimsy side show. The gambler Rosenthal was killed.

The Coffee House Club—the noonday rendezvous of the literati. A dinner at the hotel. A dollar party. A turtle thinks about? Every musical show has a midget. A dollar party. Pale faces ravaged by dissipation.

The whirl of the public library. Every stratum of life—the plutocrat and pauper. And always the old women with their wilted flowers. Two taxis smash together. The drivers fight, and policemen rush up. A great old crowd magic candle burning with activity.

The ceaseless human tide flowing down the Grand Central ramp. And around the corner in Lexington avenue and Van Ness. The endless parade of the Chinese to shop and tip and tip and tip. The endless parade of the Chinese to shop and tip and tip and tip.

The Boverly underworld is really a world of down and outers. They are not criminals—merely drifters who live only for the day. Murderers, gamblers, Jack-the-Rippers and worse do not run in a pack. Neither does the lesser brood of pickpockets and petty thieves.

It is interesting to watch the changing character of the crowds on Fifth Avenue around sundown. When all the homegoers have passed, the real avenue comes out to stroll. Almost any block has its handful of millionaires—names that boom first pages. There is a sort of restricted area where they walk. It begins at the Plaza fountain and ends at Forty-second Street. Second-seed seems to be a social deadline.

And visitors who expect to see the real New York in the dining room of the grand hotels are usually out of luck. Most of the patrons are like themselves visitors. One of the most New Yorkish crowds I have seen in many moons was in a tea room in West Fifty-first Street that served a $1.50 dinner. Among those I saw there were Irving Berlin, Brooks John, Edgar Selwyn, Elsie Janis and her mother, James Montgomery Flagg, Gilbert Miller, Conde Nast, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and the Six Morgan dancers.

Finding the haunt of the New Yorker is like trying to find vice in Chinatown. The feel of dark crime hangs over the place because of the dinky, badly lighted streets, but there is less crime in Chinatown than any other given area in New York. Opium dens supposed to be filled with the waste of white womanhood are not there. Most opium parlors are on quiet streets in the fashionable west side. Chinatown wickedness consists mostly in sitting about playing fan for small stakes and sipping hot and cold tea. It is natural that the Chinese to shop and tip and tip and tip. This adds greatly to the illusion of vice and mystery.

Chinatown wickedness consists mostly in sitting about playing fan for small stakes and sipping hot and cold tea. It is natural that the Chinese to shop and tip and tip and tip. This adds greatly to the illusion of vice and mystery.

The Boverly underworld is really a world of down and outers. They are not criminals—merely drifters who live only for the day. Murderers, gamblers, Jack-the-Rippers and worse do not run in a pack. Neither does the lesser brood of pickpockets and petty thieves.

It is interesting to watch the changing character of the crowds on Fifth Avenue around sundown. When all the homegoers have passed, the real avenue comes out to stroll. Almost any block has its handful of millionaires—names that boom first pages. There is a sort of restricted area where they walk. It begins at the Plaza fountain and ends at Forty-second Street. Second-seed seems to be a social deadline.

And visitors who expect to see the real New York in the dining room of the grand hotels are usually out of luck. Most of the patrons are like themselves visitors. One of the most New Yorkish crowds I have seen in many moons was in a tea room in West Fifty-first Street that served a $1.50 dinner. Among those I saw there were Irving Berlin, Brooks John, Edgar Selwyn, Elsie Janis and her mother, James Montgomery Flagg, Gilbert Miller, Conde Nast, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and the Six Morgan dancers.

Finding the haunt of the New Yorker is like trying to find vice in Chinatown. The feel of dark crime hangs over the place because of the dinky, badly lighted streets, but there is less crime in Chinatown than any other given area in New York. Opium dens supposed to be filled with the waste of white womanhood are not there. Most opium parlors are on quiet streets in the fashionable west side. HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE FUEL IS WRONG, NOT THE OIL.

The human machine, especially when it is brand new, requires a particularly kind of fuel, pure, high-grade fuel, for satisfactory working, but contrary to a popular notion it requires no oil at all. Unlike the flivver, the human machine is automatic in lubrication. To the average unprofessional nurse or social prescriber it probably seems strange that such a complicated process as alimentation—the ingestion and absorption of nutriment and the excretion of the indigestible residue—should go on so smoothly without occasional oiling, especially in the case of the baby. But we must remember that these people start out with a morbid premise, namely, that because a baby's voluntary muscles and mental development are weak and undeveloped his involuntary or automatic functions must be weak also—and besides this false premise they generally harbor a varied assortment of plain every-day fishwife superstitions which, if not cast out by a little intelligence in the household, insure for the luckless infant a stormy existence, or perhaps a happy death.

Death? Isn't that dragging a serious matter into the discussion of a trivial condition? No. There is mentioning a common, everyday outcome of the very ignorance in the care of babies. If we Americans did a little more to take care of our own children and devoted the time thus saved to a study of the rudiments of hygiene, perhaps we would not kill off so quickly a frightfully large proportion of our young as we do at present. Here and there in the darkness a feeble candle glimmers, but even today you can count on your fingers the number of common schools where little girls are taught the care of the baby. The myths and fairy tales are considered the right kind of education for school children.

From the constant complaint of mothers about the trouble they experience in "regulating the baby's bowels" it seems clear that the main fault in the constitution of infants is with the fuel, not with the engine. Inadequate food which happens to "agree"—that is to say the baby takes it all right—is alone responsible for the constipation, and without an inkling of this the parents light resort to laxatives, purgatives, enemata and suppositories, all of which merely add to the trouble. I repeat, and I cannot repeat too often, that with rare exceptions it is unnecessary and harmful to feed an infant any kind of physic or to resort to any other unnatural means of exciting catharsis. It is downright cruel, though usually excusable, to string the baby along on some cheap food just because it "ag

POINCARÉ ASSAILS FAITH OF GERMANY

Paris, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—Former Premier Poincaré, speaking for about five hours in the senate today on the Dawes report and German reparations, declared that a beginning ought to be made by Germany voting laws necessary under the experts' report. If Germany signed another protocol, it would be another German signature, and that was all.

M. Poincaré was of the opinion that "the true aim of the British foreign office is to get rid of the reparations commission."

He was not satisfied with the commission dealing with the latest interview between Premier MacDonald and Herriot, saying: "It seems to restrict and modify the powers of the reparations commission. I have no fear of the addition of an American delegate to the commission, but it is singular to see such precautions taken against us."

TRUCK SLAYS GIRL, 7, IN COLUMBUS ACCIDENT

Columbus, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—Crushed under the forewheel of a truck driven by John J. Carmack, Thursday afternoon near the Alabama end of the Fourteenth street bridge across the Chattahoochee river, Emma Lee McVey, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McVey, of Phenix City, Ala., died immediately after reaching a local hospital, where she was rushed.

According to police and eye-witnesses, the little girl was crossing the bridge on her way home from the Columbus side of the river. She is said to have run directly in front of the truck. Several other children were with her.

Carmack is said to have brought his machine to a quick stop, as evidenced by the fact that only the front wheel passed over her body, crushing it. He hurried her to the hospital and notified the police. He was being held at police headquarters pending further investigation tonight.

FEIDELSON URGES CHILD LABOR LAWS IN ATHENS ADDRESS

Athens, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—Charles Feidelson, of William and Mary college, speaking on child labor legislation today before the Parent-Teacher association delegates at the University of Georgia summer school, urged parents and teachers of Georgia to encourage state legislation for the protection of children.

"No imposition on agricultural interests of the state was contemplated in the recent amendment to the constitution providing for a child labor law, and which was defeated by the Georgia legislature in the referendum," said Mr. Feidelson. "It is impossible for an open-minded and enlightened person to suppose that the federal government had any idea of invading our farms or taking any such measure. The amendment was purely an enabling act, providing for legislation in conjunction with the state legislatures."

LA FOLLETTE LOSES FARMER-LABOR PARTY

Chicago, July 10.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, endorsed for president last week at the conference for progressive political action, will not receive the support of the farmer-labor party, which held its convention recently at St. Paul, it was announced today by the executive committee of the party.

The executive committee approved the withdrawal of Duncan McDonald, of Illinois, and William Bouck, of Washington state, its nominees for president and vice president, respectively, and endorsed the candidacy of William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, of New York, nominees of the workers' party of America.

The committee in a statement said that the conference for progressive political action at Cleveland "had surrendered to La Follette, betrayed the farmer-labor masses into the hands of merchants, manufacturers, bankers and rich farmers and thus destroyed the only chance for a united front campaign in the coming presidential election."

The betrayal at Cleveland makes impossible any united front in the farmer-labor campaign," said the statement. "It delivers into the hands of La Follette and the propped middle classes, whom he represents, large sections of labor. It shows the complete surrender of the labor bureaucracy and the bankruptcy of the policies which dominate the C. P. P. A. to La Follette and La Folletteism. The united front in the coming campaign, therefore, becomes impossible."

CAPITAL DOUBTFUL UPON ARBITRATION

Washington, July 10.—In the absence of official word on the suggestion that an American on the reparations commission might serve as an arbitrator in determining questions relating to a German default, there was speculation here today on whether any representative of the United States could take over such a task, even if it were deemed desirable by this government, under the provisions of the treaty with Germany prohibiting the United States from associating itself with the general subject of allied reparations.

Whether Owen D. Young, the American delegate, could be given authority by President Coolidge to so act without senatorial sanction, if such a course were decided upon, would first be passed upon by the solicitor of the state department and possibly by other government legal advisers, it was said. That he serve as a special arbitrator in a strictly limited capacity was one solution seen by some observers. The state department was still without direct reports of the agreement and comment was withheld.

PARIS COMMENT GENERALLY OPTIMISTIC.

Paris, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The result of the conference here between Premier Herriot and the British prime minister, Mr. MacDonald, is generally well received in the press except by the Poincaré opposition, although even "Pertinax" is obliged grudgingly to admit that Mr. Herriot "more effectively defended the French cause than in the pipe-to-pipe conference at Chequers." He concludes, however, that "the Chequers chain is loosened; it is not broken."

The Petit Parisien, widely circulated newspaper of no particular political color, says unreservedly "yesterday was a red-letter day. The Franco-British conversations were concluded by an agreement as clear and complete as possible."

MACDONALD CONCEDES MUCH FOR HARMONY.

London, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The British prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, made a statement in the house of commons today, explaining his recent visit to Paris and his discussion with M. Herriot, the French premier, on the reparations situation.

It is evident from this statement that Mr. MacDonald has gone a long way to allay and meet French resentments and susceptibilities, even to the extent of temporarily giving up some of his own pet ideas in an endeavor to help the Herriot government ward off an initial attack by the Poincaré bloc in the French senate.

It had been agreed by the British ministers and liberal leaders to await the outcome of the debate in the French senate before debating the subject in the British parliament; hence the British debate now is scheduled for Monday.

MacDonald Makes Concession.

In the memorandum accompanying the original British invitation to Italy, Belgium and Japan to attend an international conference, the British government proposed that in the event of a German default the matter might be referred to the league of nations or the Hague arbitration tribunal, thus lifting it out of the hands of the reparations commission. It was this prospect that caused so much resentment in France and gave M. Poincaré a weapon with which to attack Premier Herriot.

The British prime minister's statement shows that idea of reference to the league or the Hague had been dropped and that in its stead an endeavor was being made to secure American help for such arbitration duties. He refused to acknowledge that he had withdrawn anything, explaining that the whole question had been left to the pending allied conference to decide.

League, Hague Not Mentioned.

League, Hague Not Mentioned. But, in essence, it is a withdrawal. Since no mention is now made of the league or the Hague, and it is considered evident that Mr. MacDonald concentrated his whole efforts on preventing, so far as he was able, any contempt likely to lead to the overthrow of the Herriot government, or miscarriage of the coming conference. The prime minister admitted that the French government was still withholding its opinion on the proposed American arbitrator.

Two other important points came out in Premier MacDonald's statement, namely, that the British government declined to associate the question of interallied debts with the experts' report and would equally refuse to agree to any military pact with France.

Black Gold Wins Rating Handicap

Chicago, July 10.—With Jockey

Johnny Mooney astride his back, Black-Gold, winner of the $50,000 Kentucky derby, won the derby racing handicap at one mile at Hawthorne today, finishing eight lengths ahead of King Gorin II, and pulling up in 145 3-5. Graeme finished third and Bourbon Boy, the fourth starter, last.

The price on the famous three-year-old son of Black Tony-Use-It was 3 to 5.

The ease with which Black Gold won made the colt the choice for the $20,000 Chicago derby Saturday afternoon.

CRACKERS SHUT OUT CHICKS IN SERIES OPENER

U. S. Olympic Total Leaps in Spite of Nurmi

Benny Karr Holds Memphis Batters to Two Safeties; Warmouth Gives Up 8 Hits

Finn Takes 2 First Places In Distance, but Americans Win Hammer Toss and Vault

Colombes Stadium, Paris, July 10. They may have to put a ball and chain on the ankles of every American athlete in the Olympic track and field games just to retard their winning stride and make the blame thing interesting.

The Americans took first, second and third places in the pole vault Thursday, thanks in part to the withdrawal of the world champion, Hoff, of Sweden. These feats added 20 points to the score.

Then to make matters worse for those nations who have an eye on competing for this year's championship, Tootell and Matt McGrath, the large New York hammer-throwers, tossed the hammer half-way across France for 15 more points. Tootell winning and McGrath taking second. Jim MacEachern, of San Francisco, added another point, being sixth.

Nurmi Clinches Crown.

The real honors of the day, however, went to Paavo Nurmi, of Finland, the tireless running machine from Helsinki, who within the space of one hour walked off with two first places in the longer runs. Nurmi won the 1,500 meters carrying an Ingersoll in his hand with which he timed himself every 100 yards, paying absolutely no attention to the others in the race. Yet, so fast was his stride that in the desperate scramble to keep up with him, Stalard, of England, collapsed at the finish and was unconscious for an hour. Ray Watson, of the United States, tried to run with Nurmi for the first part of the race and was so exhausted that he didn't even finish in the money.

The other place winners were still lying around on the grass by the finish line when Nurmi had sprinted back to the dressing room to rest up for the 5,000 meters. Ray Baker and Lloyd Hahn, of the U. S. A., were fifth and sixth in the 1,500. Nurmi in winning the 5,000 would have had the same easy time had it not been for his little fellow countryman, Willie Ritola, late of New York, who set out to try to win the race himself. Ritola caused Nurmi all kinds of trouble, but could not beat him. They finished a yard apart about 100 yards ahead of the rest of the field in new Olympic time. Johnny Rönig, of the U. S. A., was fourth in the 5,000.

Nurmi Ignores Ritola.

There was head blood between the two Finns and at the end when Ritola tried to congratulate Paavo, Nurmi turned away and ignored his hand. American casualties came in the trials of the 400 meters when two of the four Yankees were forced out.

in the second round. The United States still has two men in the semi-finals, however. It was the second round of the 400 meters which produced the only world record of the day. And this surprising enough was made by young Swiss boy, Imbach, a horse of extremely brunette complexion. His time was 48 seconds and it was in this heat that Wilson of the U. S. A., was beaten out of a qualifying place.

Lee Barnes, a high school boy from Hollywood, Cal., won the pole vault at 32 feet 8 1/2 inches, which was 3 1/2 inches shy of the trial height that the Americans made at Harvard a month ago. Ralph Spearer, of the University of Oregon, was expected to take the title after the withdrawal of Hoff. Glenn Graham of California Tech was second to Barnes, and Jim Brooker of University of Michigan was third.

The United States had a point score of 17 at the end of the day, Finland came next with 10; Sweden had 4 1/2; France, 13 1/2; Switzerland, 10; Hungary, 7 1/2; South Africa, 5; New Zealand and Norway 4 each; Denmark 3 1/2 and Canada 2.

GA. HANDBALL TOURNAMENT ON HERE SAT.

The Y. M. C. A. handball championship of the state will be decided on the Central "Y" courts next Saturday in both singles and doubles. This is the first championship ever held in handball in the state and the handball fans are enthusiastic over the prospect of the games to be played Saturday.

Handball is not a new game by any means, but is one of the most popular games for the average business man, and is played by thousands throughout the country. The game in Atlanta has been increasing greatly during the past couple of years, and at Central some very good players have been developed. Phillips, one of the best players in the city, will represent Central in the singles. Plant and Cole will pair up for the doubles.

The doubles will begin at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning and the singles at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. No admission will be charged. Augusta and Macon have entered teams and will arrive in the city Friday to be in shape for the fray.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Virginia Lowry Maude to Edmund Madison Eastman, formerly of Rome, now of Atlanta, is of pleasant interest to Atlanta society. Mrs. John W. Akin Entertains for Her Granddaughter

Mrs. John W. Akin entertained at an informal party Thursday afternoon at her home on Habersham road, the occasion complimenting her little granddaughter, Miss Mary de Verdery Akin, and celebrating her sixth birthday.

Many games were played and prizes awarded the winners. A fishing pond and a Jack Horner pie were also arranged for the amusement of the little guests.

The table was overlaid with a lace cloth and gracing the center was a silver bowl holding garden flowers with the pink shades predominating. Placed in front of the little hostess was an exquisitely embossed birthday cake ornamented with six pink candles. The cakes, ices and bonbons reflected the rose color motif.

Miss Frances Akin Odell, gowned in green voile, and Miss Lillian Ruth Akin, wearing white voile, assisted their sister in receiving.

Mrs. Akin was gowned in midnight blue voile, crystal embroidered. Little Miss Odell, the pretty little honor guest, wore a handmade frock of blue voile.

Atlanta Girl Runs Column For New York Newspaper

Miss Adrienne Battey, well-known Atlantan, who now resides in New York, was among the literary lights contributing to Round the Town, S. Jay Kaufman's column in a New York newspaper.

Miss Adrienne Battey, of Atlanta, who is now residing in New York, and whose literary ability and talent is becoming recognized in the metropolis, was among the celebrities contributing to S. Jay Kaufman's widely read column, "Round the Town," in the New York Telegram and Evening Mail of Monday, July 7.

Others who have already written for this column at the request of Mr. Kaufman include Mayor Hylan, Fannie Hurst, Jane Cowl and Walter J. Kingsley.

Miss Battey writes: "The little southern boy I mention in two stories is my young nephew, Holbrook Bonney, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bonney. 'Joseph' is of course Joseph Schildkraut, known the country over as the star of 'Lillian' and 'Peer Gynt.' Many Atlanta people have seen him—and there's nothing more worth looking at in this neck of the woods, if you ask me! He is known as 'the handsomest actor on the stage.' The other night when Sidney Blackmer opened in his new play, 'The Blue Bandanna,' I was in a small group with Joseph Schildkraut, and dear old Sid had to look to his laurels to keep all eyes to the front—so many were craning necks to glimpse the handsome Joseph in the audience. Mr. Blackmer had a double role, and really covered himself with glory."

The column, which is exceptionally interesting and replete with snappy comments, is as follows:

A Little Learning.
"Mary Brent Whiteside, American poet, has returned from a Mediterranean cruise. While abroad she addressed the London Poetry Society, an honor accorded but once before to an American woman. She tells of two sightseers on deck as their boat neared Constantinople. One exclaimed, 'Oh, look at the domes and minarets.' To which her companion replied, 'They're not domes and minarets, they're minarets.'"

The Fine Arts.
"The provincial visitor was duly overcome at the prospect of meeting a Broadway playwright at dinner. Highbrow themes not being in her line, she sagely waited for the dramatist to choose a fitting topic for discussion. Hardly had the meal begun when this awesome personage launched forth upon the subject of cake baking. He exchanged favorite recipes with his hostess, and the table repartee thereafter consisted of—'Do you pour the eggs into the flour or the flour into the eggs?' 'Oh, there's nothing I enjoy more.' 'How much sugar did you say?' 'Now I use three cups of milk, and then stir.' 'After this she said she had ordered for an hour and a half the bewilderment visitor contrived to gasp: 'But when do you find time to write?'"

His Valet the Hero.
"The matinee girl was an old friend of Sidney Blackmer's. Receiving a box of daffodils from the home town, she thought to share this reminder of springtime in the south. It was an hour before his performance. But Yano, his valet, was sure to be in the theater and would arrange the flowers as a surprise. At the stage door she inquired for Yano. He was not known by name. 'Oh,' carelessly, 'Yano will understand.' And she was gone. Weeks passed and no acknowledgment from Sidney, a most appreciative person usually. The matinee girl was adding this item to the list of good deeds gone wrong when she overheard a chuckle and this at a dance: 'Well, it's a safe bet Sidney Blackmer is no hero to his valet, what with some fair one sending the Jap a bouquet right under his nose.'"

High Cost of Dying.
"There was one question his Book of Knowledge didn't answer. So the five-year-old put it to his auntie: 'Does it cost anything to die?' Assured that this part of living was the most costly of all, the youngster urged: 'How much?' 'A lot to say his aunt named a thousand dollars as a likely sum. 'Huh!' her questioner retorted, 'taint worth it.'"

One Guess Allowed.
"A ditty drowsy in 'Fashion' is doubly amusing to those familiar with the

THE ERRING WIFE AND MOTHER is the woman who sacrifices her health and consequent happiness to her ambition. We all know such women,—anxious that their homes shall be kept immaculately neat and attractive and their children well dressed, they overdo and soon bring on some feminine ailment which is evidenced by nervousness, irritability, headaches, backache and other aches and pains attending such ills. Every woman should remember that the most successful remedy for such conditions is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which for fifty years has been restoring women to health, strength and happiness.—(adv.)

Women Voters Will Give Candidates Luncheon Series

Beginning with Tuesday, July 15, at 12:30 o'clock, at the Peacock cafe, the Atlanta League of Women Voters will sponsor a series of candidates luncheons every Tuesday for an indefinite length of time. The different candidates running for offices to be filled in the fall elections will be invited to come to the league's guests, and make short speeches. These luncheons are open to any one who would like to come and personally meet the candidates and hear their addresses.

Mrs. Sanford Gay, president of the Atlanta league, says: "These luncheons will give every eligible voter in the city of Atlanta an opportunity to meet and become personally acquainted with the people running for offices to be filled in the fall. I feel that every one interested in the welfare of Atlanta and wanting to vote for the right person cannot fail to see the advantage they have in attending these luncheons, and I am erecting large crowds."

It is the paramount purpose of the league members to make these luncheons friendly and homelike affairs, and an atmosphere of informality will be maintained throughout the series of luncheons.

exclusive quality of a distinguished young artist of our stage whom the lines suggest. It runs: 'No, no, no, not for Joe; if he knows it, not for Joseph.' The star in question was corralled once and induced to accept a Sunday tea engagement. And I went. But this strange compliance ended when the guests were presented, in turn, with the ingredients of a salad and asked to mix their own. The illustrious Joseph turned his perfect profile. 'I only eat,' he said, 'I don't prepare the food.'"

Illusion Shattered.
"The small southern boy had never been inside a New York theater. He teased to be taken to one in particular. It was Saturday. The house was sold out. His mother turned from the box office to relay the sad news: 'There are no seats, only standing room.' She was prepared for disappointment, but not the scorn of his comment: 'No seats? he repeated. Then, wistfully, as he turned away, 'Bum theater.'"

The Burning Question.
"It was the heartless prank of a favorite dramatic critic to hop from staff to staff quicker than his readers could change their newspaper subscriptions. The chase waxed exasperating before he finally bobbed up with the Sun one day. During a blank interval between leaps a feminine playgoer was called to the telephone. A man's voice at the other end set her maiden pulse a-flutter. It was charged with emotion. 'Dear,' he began, with a sigh of relief, 'you don't know how glad I am to get you after trying all this time. There is something very important to me—that I want to ask.' She strained her ears to catch the words. It seemed odd, but very pleasant, this proposal over the phone. Then his voice again saying, 'Where is Alexander Wolcott?'"

Dead Men tell no tales.
"But some other gink always volunteers to do it for them."

A STRAIGHT line is the shortest distance between two points.

A mathematical principle which cannot be disputed, you will say, if you are a fundamentalist.

Now, we, in the abandon of a modernist moment in which we shall cast off the hampering influence even of facts, let alone dogmas, assert, and expect to prove that the theory of mathematics as cited above, is a mere whimsicality, very subject to altering conditions, and that anybody who holds it as dogma, hide-bound and unchanging, is deliberately self-deluded.

We shall go farther than most modernists, for where we knock over a prop of outworn belief, like the foolish fallacy that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, we propose to set up something in its place, and that is:

For women, indirection has always been the shortest cut.

It had to be.

If a woman wanted something done about the public welfare that could be secured only by political action, she did not have the franchise; so, instead of going directly to the ballot box to register her wishes in the matter, she had to go to the voter—her husband, her father—and coax him to bring about what she wanted.

If her housewife's sixth sense told her that a new carpet was needed for the chancel steps, the direct way to go about getting a new one would have been to state the facts to the congregation and assess each church member so much.

But—three things stood in the way.

First. She had no voice in the church.

Second. A large part of the membership—the women—had no funds of their own for such demands.

Third. The men of the congregation, not possessing the housewife's sixth sense, thought the old carpet good enough.

The woman with the tendency to indirection inherited through countless generations of just such cases, got up a bazaar, and after working herself and a devoted few others into near-prostration, and dragging both men and women of the congregation unwillingly into the purchase of articles they didn't want and the eating of food they knew they'd better without, the carpet fund would finally be raised.

But lo and behold! Do you realize what is happening?

Bazaars are going out. In nearly all the churches church support before raised by one system or another of direct assessment, instead of bazaars and oyster suppers.

There is no positive way to determine how this has been brought about. Maybe the men are beginning to realize the common sense of applying business methods to the handling of the necessary business end of the church institution.

Or maybe the women, by their long cultivated system of indirection, were able to blindfold the husbands and fathers of the congregation and back them into this new plan.

Taking Up New Way.

WHAT really brought up this whole subject, however, is a significant series of things which concern women in their new public life; their life of organization.

Outstanding among these are two situations in Georgia and North Carolina; southern states which might be expected, because of the long and strong opposition in the south to the suffrage for women, to lag in movements recognizing the new franchise. In Georgia the state university at Athens and Mercer university at Macon are conducting their second annual "club institutes," which are nothing more nor less than schools for the scientific training of women in the principles of organization.

With all the handicap of necessary indirection, the women were able to do such a significant amount of work for their state, even without scientific knowledge of organization, that the "best minds," as represented in the management of these two universities, have put at the disposal of the clubwomen the machinery of the two schools to teach them "quickest and easiest ways" of efficiency with its saving in place of lost motion with its waste.

In North Carolina a school of citizenship is to be put on, beginning July 14, under the joint auspices of the Asheville Normal school and the Buncombe County Democratic Women's club. The benefits of the school, by the way, will be carried all over the south, because the normal's summer school registers pupils from the very responsible high offices in public life.

How quickly, then, since the women are permitted to get away from the old devices ways of indirection, are they taking up the new.

And be it said for their lords and masters they are most generally leading them into the new way.

For the guiding force of the Asheville Normal is masculine, as is that of the University of Georgia and of Mercer.

FINALLY, there is the frequent quotation of such women leaders as Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt when they politely but firmly disclaim any general desire on the part of the women who are taking their new citizenship seriously and actively for the very responsible high offices in public life.

"The women," says Mrs. Roosevelt, and her statement is typical of a large part of the woman-sentiment in politics, "have not yet the experience for such responsibility."

In other words, they do not know enough.

But may it not be conceded that they have gone a long way—that they have a very valuable knowledge—when they realize how little they know, and are willing to go to school to learn?

Stimulation of the Arts.

THE city of Atlanta, which has always been our home, and the city of Asheville, which after nearly two years we are beginning to know nearly as well, are experiencing a curious, similar stimulation of growth, both commercially—in which sense, both the rising of beautiful new hotels is a striking manifestation—and in the direction of fine arts.

Atlanta in the spring had the beginning of a great enterprise in its superb exhibition of paintings and sculpture from the Central Art Galleries of New York, an enterprise so successful that it is to be made an annual event.

Asheville is preparing to launch an art colony on lines similar to Provincetown or Taos, but more comprehensive.

While Atlanta has its annual engagement of the Metropolitan Opera company in April, Asheville, which engineers each summer a festival of music, has chosen for this August a season of eight performances by the San Carlo Opera company, an organization which has successful seasons in the home cities of the Metropolitan and Chicago companies.

An Important Appointment.

NOW comes a happening in the fine arts which also curiously associates the interests of Georgia and North Carolina people.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has given the appointment of chairman of the department of fine arts for the national body to Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, a native of North Carolina, whose marriage took her to live in Atlanta.

The appointment of Mrs. Inman is significant in more than one way, and to a much larger group than even the club women.

We are inclined to believe that while the choice of Mrs. Inman for the chairmanship was directly due to her personal fitness for leadership in a kind of work in which she has always taken an active and a constructive interest, the General Federation had in mind also that the best way to extend the scope and strengthen the art spirit in America is to have its center of radiation in a section in which the art spirit has been least active, and therefore needs greatest stimulation.

The spark to light a real popularization of the arts in this section is proving itself very much alive, and now the very fact of a southern woman's being chairman of fine arts for this influential body of women will draw national attention to art projects in the south.

Moreover, it can be counted upon that Mrs. Inman, who has a very strong national viewpoint, combined with an equally strong southern spirit, will make an aggressive part of her department's program to put the strength of the women behind every worthwhile effort in the south to broaden and vary its art interests.

How quickly, then, since the women are permitted to get away from the old devices ways of indirection, are they taking up the new.

And be it said for their lords and masters they are most generally leading them into the new way.

For the guiding force of the Asheville Normal is masculine, as is that of the University of Georgia and of Mercer.

Fair-Weather Wives

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

Marjorie Learns the Truth.

Ivan's operation was a complete success. Dr. Danby telephoned the anxious family, waiting in the library at Soundview, (Lelia and Mrs. Boice-Nevis had actually remained home from a bridge luncheon in deference to the fact that he had no less assurance that the work of the great surgeon who had performed the operation that Ivan would sing again and shortly.

Lelia celebrated the good news with a round of parties that cost Marjorie a pretty penny. Mrs. Boice-Nevis aided and abetted her in the extravagance.

"You see, I'm really under obligations to everyone," Lelia explained with maddening hypocrisy. "And of course, while poor dear Ivan was ill, it wouldn't have been just the thing to entertain."

She quite overlooked the fact that she hadn't missed a dinner or dance or tea herself during Ivan's illness.

But Marjorie was too happy and relieved over her brother-in-law's good fortune to complain if Lelia was using her hospitality rather shabbily. She was busily engaged in planning for the future. As soon as Ivan was on his feet, she decided, then she would announce her long deferred plan to Mrs. Boice-Nevis and Dan. When the storm had blown itself out and she was free of Hollister's hateful charity, she would marry Tom.

Lelia took Ivan, convalescent at last, to Florida to complete his recuperation. Marjorie paid the bills without protest. It was shortly after their arrival at Miami that Lelia wrote asking her to go to Dr. Danby on some errand with regard to a prescription.

The door of the doctor's waiting room was ajar, when Marjorie located his suite of offices in a smart uptown apartment building. The young woman who presided there had obviously deserted her post temporarily.

Marjorie, stepping back and glancing at the small letters inscribed in the glass of the door, discovered that the doctor's office hours were just over. She hesitated a moment on the threshold, and then, hearing his voice in an adjoining room, decided to wait until the patient who was inside departed and he discovered her there. He could probably spare her the few minutes that her errand required.

But after a minute she discovered that it was not a patient to whom he was speaking. "He was apparently talking over the phone."

"I got your secretary's note about the cheque this morning, Mr. Hollister," he was saying. "but I thought I'd better ring you and talk to you personally considering the secrecy of this case. As you suggested in your letter, I agree that it would be better not to send your personal cheque to Dr. Fordyce, so that you will not be connected in any way with the affair. I can have a draft sent through the Foundation to which you have contributed so generously in the past. . . . No trouble at all, I assure you. . . . What? . . . Splendidly, very satisfying. He has just reached Miami. . . ."

Dr. Danby's voice went on, but Marjorie was no longer listening. She sat staring straight before her, her red under lip caught in her teeth until the blood came, her gloved hands tight in her lap.

So that was the secret of the mysterious patron whose interest in science had made possible Ivan's return to health and hope!

Reed Hollister! She might have known! What a fool she had been to swallow Dr. Danby's incredible story! How could she ever have accepted it as plausible!

It was Reed Hollister, her husband, who once again had put her and her family in the class of charity.

Her face burned with shame, with stinging pride. She had been spared the ordeal of personally asking Hollister for assistance, but she felt no distinguishing virtue in the manner through which she had become a recipient.

When Dr. Danby finished his conversation and entered the reception room he started uneasily at sight of the slim figure in rich furs that occupied a corner of a divan.

"Why, Mrs. Hollister, what a surprise! I didn't know—the girl didn't say anyone was here!"

His professional poise was decidedly shaken.

"Sorry to have kept you waiting. I was—er—telephoning about a very sad case."

"Dr. Danby," Marjorie was standing before him, her grave eyes compelling him, "will you tell me the truth? Wasn't it—my husband—who provided the means for my brother-in-law's operation? I heard just enough in there," she gestured with a gloved hand toward the inner office. "It would be kinder to tell me."

He looked very embarrassed, but he could not resist her earnestness. "If you will have the truth then, it was Mr. Hollister who provided. But he swore me to secrecy. He has been a patron of science for many years. It is not extraordinary that he would wish to see this case through. Indeed, he has interested himself in the most obscure cases," he checked himself in time—he had been about to say "charity cases"—"You must not allow yourself to feel resentful, Mrs. Hollister."

Marjorie went away wondering how much the doctor knew of her relationship to Reed Hollister.

One thing she was determined upon: to accept nothing more from Hollister, not even her daily bread. Now was the time to strike!

When she arrived at Soundview, Dan was waiting for her.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Tips to Housewives. Pare apples with a silver knife to avoid discoloration. Look over the refrigerator each day for signs of decay in food.

Lined oil will clean black walnut frames and make them look like new.

Rinse the lemon squeezer immediately and it will save you much annoyance later on.

Dried fruits are usually dirty and should be rinsed with boiling water before cooking.

Punishing the Youngster. We mothers all are alike in disliking to punish our babies; but we also know it must be done at times. However, it does not always have to be severe, and possibly if we revert to the time-old remedy of standing the offender in the corner or sitting him on a chair until promises of good behavior are forthcoming, we will get fine results, saving the equally old-fashioned whipping for just very important occasions. Only, if you promise him a whipping, keep that promise just as you would any other.

AMERICA REJECTS TREATY OF LEAGUE

Geneva, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The United States government has officially informed the league of nations that it cannot adhere to the draft of the treaty of mutual assistance which the fourth assembly of the league voted should be circulated among all the governments with the request for expression of their views.

Holding that the fundamental principle of the treaty is to provide guarantees of mutual assistance and to establish the competency of the council of the league with respect to any decisions contemplated, the United States government says that in view of the United States constitution and of the fact that America is not a member of the league, the United States would find it impossible to give its adherence to the treaty.

FRENCH CHAMBER BREAKS UP IN ROW ON AMNESTY BILL

Paris, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—An uproar again caused President of the Chamber, Painlevé, to suspend a sitting of the chamber this morning, but the incident was free from fistuffs.

François Poncet, a member of the minority, was speaking on the amnesty bill when the communists unrolled an electoral poster accusing M. Poncet of being a co-director with a German colonel on the board of a Sargre financial company, crying: "You are an agent of the Boches."

Members of the minority called upon M. Painlevé to suspend the communists, and when he did not respond, they cried "resign," while the left cheered.

The president suspended the sitting amid jeering cries from the left, bidding the right to "go to Berlin," to which the right jeered, answering them "go to Moscow."

Glynn County Is Bedecked STATE, COUNTY AND ROAD OFFICERS ON PROGRAM For New Road Dedication

Brunswick, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—Brunswick is prepared to entertain one of the largest crowds in her history tomorrow when Georgians from every section of the state will attend the formal opening of the Brunswick-St. Simon's highway, an event which has been looked forward to by citizens of Glynn county for many weeks, and for which a dozen committees have been at work for the past week arranging details for the unusual program which has been arranged for the occasion.

Brunswick is "dressed up in her best" for the occasion; there is hardly a business house in the entire city that is not covered with gay-colored hunting and flags; automobiles are decorated, practically every one in the city having "at least a few flags flying," while the streets of the city are covered with large flags hung across the streets, from tops of buildings and flagpoles, and elsewhere. In fact it is doubtful if the city has ever been so "dressed up" as for the occasion of the "dress parade," as unless the weather man acts the part of "the meanest man in the world" tomorrow, Brunswick will present a truly holiday appearance.

Spectators Arrive.
The size of the crowd has not been overestimated as is already evident from the large number of people who have already arrived. Today every road leading into the city was crowded with automobile parties, and tonight it looked as if every city in Georgia was represented in the procession of visiting cars that paraded the streets. The biggest crowd is expected tomorrow morning when the three railroads entering the city will bring in excursions.

Various committees, which have been so hard at work, announced tonight that everything was in readiness and every detail has been completed for the celebration. One of the biggest tasks of any of the committees was that of serving a fish dinner on the island for all visitors, but the committee in charge of this feature is prepared to feed every out-of-town person.

B. F. MANN

B. F. Mann, Glynn county representative in the Georgia assembly, will be master of ceremonies, and after an invocation by Rev. D. Watson Winn, of St. Simon, he will introduce Dr. J. W. Simmons, of this city, who will deliver the address of welcome on behalf of Brunswick and Glynn county.

The road will be accepted on the part of the state of Georgia by Governor, and tonight tables stretching for blocks had been erected under the large oaks at St. Simon mills, where the highway crosses.

The program arranged for Friday will keep the visitors busy for the entire day, though they will have ample time for rest and recreation before the highway is opened.

MALCOLM B. MCKINNON

between times, especially in the middle of the day, when a recess will be taken for two or three hours.

The day's festivities will begin here at 10 o'clock in the morning, when a parade will be formed at a point beginning in the center of the city. About 40 of the prettiest floats that have been prepared in this section of the state have entered. Following the floats will come a large number of decorated automobiles, carrying the speakers, officials, special guests and others. The parade will move through the principal streets of the city and will then proceed out on Glynn avenue, where the highway begins, and the entire parade will then cross the new highway.

As Frederica river is reached a committee of St. Simon citizens, acting for the island, will turn over to Governor Clifford Walker the keys of the island. The governor will open a large improvised gate which has been erected at the St. Simon end of the bridge and the parade will pass through, proceeding to the spot under the large oaks where the exercises are to be held.

error Walker, who will make one of the principal addresses, and he will be followed by United States Senator Walter F. George, Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution and a director of the Dixie highway, will speak. Other highway officials will deliver short addresses.

After the speaking, Mr. Mann will introduce to the people the following: E. L. Stephens, chairman of the Glynn county commissioners; Malcolm B. McKinnon, mayor of Brunswick; A. O. Townsend, clerk of the county commissioners and the Brunswick highway commission; Fernand J. Torras, engineer in charge of the construction of the highway, and the presidents of the various women's organizations of the city of Brunswick.

The gathering will then adjourn for a fish dinner and the visitors will be given until 3:30 o'clock to drive to the beach and to other points of interest over the island. At that hour the ladies of Brunswick will stage what will probably prove the greatest pageant ever put on in this section of the country.

It will be a historical pageant, depicting the early life of Brunswick and St. Simon's. About 600 will participate, all in costume, and music for the pageant will be furnished by two bands which will be in the city for the occasion.

Pioneer Days Recalled.
The afternoon program will be featured by a historical pageant, depicting the eventful days when old Fort Frederica, scene of a battle which won the colony of Georgia for Britain, was first built; when Oglethorpe, first governor of Georgia, was a frequent visitor among the settlers of old St. Simon's; and when the Wesleys, pioneers of modern evangelical religion, organized the world's first Sunday school under the spreading oaks of the island.

Elaborate entertainments for the governor and his staff are planned by the people of Brunswick for Saturday, if the cares of state permit the chief executive to stay for that day.

Since the first automobile crossed over the new causeway ten days ago, more than 8,000 cars have passed over its glistening white surface and the people of that section of the state are enthusiastic about the reception which has greeted the first realization of a dream they have had for years.

The causeway is about forty feet wide throughout, with an 18-foot roadway in the center. It is more than four miles long and crosses the marshes of Glynn, famous in song and poetry, bringing the sand beaches of St. Simon's to the very doors of all the people of Georgia, who may now ride direct by automobile to the island from any part of the state.

WAYCROSS ELECTS DELEGATE TO CEREMONY.

Waycross, Ga., July 10.—(Special.)—B. G. Parks has been made chairman of the Waycross Chamber of Commerce delegation to the St. Simon's bridge-opening exercises Friday. Other representatives are L. V. Odum, W. D. O'Quinn, W. E. Davidson and Dr. W. D. Mixson. Many Waycross citizens will attend the celebration.

NOT TO ASK ACQUITTAL FOR LEOPOLD AND LOEB

Chicago, July 10.—Parents of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, the youthful students who confessed kidnapping and killing Robert Franks, will not ask for an acquittal of their sons, counsel announced today.

The fees of the attorneys and the alienists in the case have been fixed by the legal and medical associations so that any talk of a "million-dollar defense fund" is "bunk," Attorney Clarence Darrow said, although the fathers are millionaires.

"The fathers of Leopold, Jr., and Loeb will make another statement concerning the expenditures for the defense of their sons in a few days," the attorney said. "They may show in this exactly what the cost of the defense will be."

"There will be no attempt made by the defense to get an acquittal. The question of insanity alone is involved."

Tribesmen Take Tazartut.
London, July 10.—Tazartut, in the Spanish zone of Morocco, has been captured by Riffian tribesmen, according to the Tangier correspondent of The Daily Mail.

SINGLE BROADCAST SYSTEM MAY SERVE CIVILIZED WORLD

London, July 10.—(By the Associated Press.)—The whole civilized world will eventually be served by a single system of radio broadcasting, it was predicted today before the world power conference in a joint contribution made by W. J. Brown, of Metropolitan cities, Great Britain, and Dr. W. H. Easton, of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., of the United States.

The system, it was stated, would be based on the use of inaudible short waves sent out by large stations and caught by small local stations which would re-broadcast them on audible wave lengths. The possibilities of this new system were proved last year, it was said, by tests between the inaudible station KDKA, of East Pittsburgh, Pa., and the station QAC, at Manchester, England, which re-broadcast audibly.

HINES WILL ADDRESS LOCAL LAWYERS' CLUB

The principal feature of the meeting of the Atlanta Lawyers' club, at 8:30 o'clock tonight in the breakfast room of the Kimball House, will be an address by Justice H. K. Hines, of the Georgia supreme court. Other entertainment features have been provided.

PEEK BREAKS SILENCE TO ACCUSE EMPLOYER

Rockford, Ill., July 10.—Breaking a stubborn silence which he had maintained since last Sunday, George Peek, of Buncombe county, North Carolina, today faced Mrs. Medill McCormick in court and repeated a formal charge that he was acting on instructions of his employer, John Wright, when he picked up a package on a roadside July 3, which had been placed as a result of a $30,000 extortion letter sent Senator McCormick.

Both Peek and his son, Clarence, declaring that they had no friends in this county and could provide no bond, were remanded to the county jail to await action on the October grand jury. John Wright, implicated by Peek's confession, will be arraigned Saturday afternoon.

"I turned the letter over for investigation," Mrs. McCormick told "because of the natural apprehension I felt for my children and for the community. I was upset and apprehensive, which was quite human in such a case."

She told of the receipt of the letter June 26, the day Senator McCormick was summoned to Europe by the illness of his mother.

Private detectives employed in the case said today that a wealthy Chicagoan residing near the McCormicks' estate had received a similar threatening letter. Although they would give no name, the only Chicagoan living in the vicinity is W. H. Burke, of the law faculty at Northwestern university, now on a western trip.

John Wright, the employer of George Peek, has employed counsel, who issued a vigorous statement declaring the charges fabricated. Church members of Middle Creek Presbyterian church, of which both Mr. Wright and Mrs. McCormick are members, have rallied to his defense. They instance the fact that Wright's life has been irreproachable.

However, as both George and Clarence Peek have been unwavering in their story of the incident, State's Attorney Johnson announced he would conduct as thorough an investigation of Wright as he had of the Peeks. Following the hearing today he said he intended to subject the Peeks to a mental examination to determine whether they are capable of composing the letter in question.

The body of this letter, which until today had been announced piecemeal, was: "We do demand you to place $50,000 north of Chambers' store at the first culvert at 9 o'clock and that you be sure you don't say anything about it to anyone, for you don't know who you are dealing with. Place it on July 3. Stop car on culvert and lay it on the left side. If you don't know what the Bible says 'in such an hour as you think not, the son of man comes.' If you do you will live happy for the rest of your days. If not you can look out for yourselves. We have got to have it some way or other. Be spunk with it."

He had been a preacher for 30 years. The burial will be tomorrow at Mayfield, Ky., where he was born and reared.

White Fang

BY JACK LONDON

But One Ear broke in to a run across the snow, his traces trailing behind him. And there, out in the snow of their back-track, was the she-wolf waiting for him. As he neared her, he became suddenly cautious. He slowed down to an alert and mincing walk and then stopped. He regarded her carefully and dubiously, yet desirably. She seemed to smile at him, showing her teeth in an ingratiating rather than a menacing way. She moved toward him a few steps, playfully, and then halted. One Ear drew near to her, still alert and cautious, his tail and ears in the air, his head held high.
He tried to sniff noses with her, but she retreated playfully and coyly. Every advance on his part was accompanied by a corresponding retreat on her part. Step by step she was luring him away from the security of his human companionship. Once, as though a warning had in vague ways filtered through his intelligence, he turned his head and looked back at the overturned sled, at his team-mates, and at the two men who were calling to him.

But whatever idea was forming in his mind, was dissipated by the she-wolf, who advanced upon him, sniffed noses with him for a fleeting instant, and then resumed her coy retreat before his renewed advances.

In the meantime, Bill had been thought himself of the rifle. But it was jammed beneath the overturned sled, and by the time Henry had helped him to right the load, One Ear and the she-wolf were too close together and the distance too great to risk a shot.

Too late, One Ear learned his mistake. Before they saw the cause, the two men saw him turn and start to run back toward them. Then, approaching at right angles to the trail and cutting off his retreat, they saw a dozen wolves, lean and gray, bounding across the snow. On the instant, the she-wolf's coyness and playfulness disappeared. With a snarl she sprang upon One Ear. He thrust her off with his shoulder, and his retreat cut off and still intent on regaining the sled, he altered his course in an attempt to circle around to it. More wolves were appearing every moment and joining in the chase. The she-wolf was one leap behind One Ear and holding her own. "Where are you going?" Henry suddenly demanded, laying his hand on his partner's arm.

Bill shook it off. "I won't stand it," he said. "They ain't a-goin' to get any more of our dogs if I can help it."
Gun in hand, he plunged into the underbrush that lined the side of the trail. His intention was apparent enough. Taking the sled as the center of the circle that One Ear was making, Bill planned to tap the pursuit. With his rifle, in the broad daylight, it might be possible for him to awe the wolves and save the dog.
"Say, Bill!" Henry called after him. "Be careful. Don't take no chances!"
Henry sat down on the sled and watched. There was nothing else for him to do. Bill had already gone from sight; but now and again, appearing and disappearing amongst the underbrush and the scattered clumps of spruce, could be seen One Ear. Henry judged his case to be hopeless. The dog was thoroughly alive to its danger, but it was running on the outer circle while the wolf-pack was running on the inner and shorter circle. It was vain to think of One Ear so outdistancing his pursuers as to be able to cut across their circle in advance of them and to regain the sled.
The different lines were rapidly approaching a point. Somewhere out there in the snow, screened from his sight by trees and thickets, Henry knew that the wolf-pack, One Ear, and Bill were coming together. All too quickly, far more quickly than he had expected, it happened. He heard a shot, then two shots in rapid succession, and he knew that Bill's ammunition was gone. Then he heard a great outcry of snarls and yelps. He recognized One Ear's yell of pain and terror, and he heard a wolf-cry that bespoke a stricken animal. And that was all. The snarls ceased. The yelping died away. Silence settled down again over the lonely land.
He sat for a long while upon the sled. There was no need for him to go and see what had happened. He knew it as though it had taken place before his eyes. Once, he roused with a start and hastily got his axe out from underneath the lashings. But for some time longer he sat and brooded, the two remaining dogs crouching and trembling at his feet.
At last he arose in a weary manner, as though all the resilience had gone out of his body, and proceeded to fasten the dogs to the sled. He passed a rope over his shoulder, a

GENERAL ERWIN DIES IN PASADENA

Pasadena, Calif., July 10.—Brigadier General James B. Erwin, retired, adjutant general of the United States army, September 4, 1914, to August 8, 1915, died here today. He was born in Georgia July 11, 1856.

General Erwin was well known in this section, and especially in Atlanta. He was born in Savannah and was a brother of the late Robert G. Erwin, president of the Atlanta Coast Line railroad. General Erwin was a first cousin of Mrs. Albert Howell, Jr., of Atlanta, and a second cousin of John A. Sibley, also of this city.

During the early period of the World War he was commanding officer at Fort Oglethorpe, near Chattanooga, and later assumed similar duties at Camp Gordon, where he was very popular among his men. He served in France during the war, having for his aides Charles Cox, present adjutant general of Georgia, and Henry B. Tomblin, of the firm of Robinson-Humphrey company, of this city.

Just before entrance of the United States into the World War Brigadier General Erwin, who was at that time colonel of a regiment of cavalry, was sent to Mexico to aid in the campaign against Villa, the famous bandit. His regiment was ordered back to the states before the capture could be effected.

Brigadier General Erwin was the first southern cadet to be graduated from West Point after the Civil war.

Harris, Hardwick, Walker Praise Democratic Nominee

Georgians in all walks of life Thursday were enthusiastic over prospects for a democratic victory in the national election following selection by the convention of John W. Davis, presidential nominee, and Charles W. Bryan, as nominee for vice president. Senator William J. Harris, Governor Clifford Walker, former Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and other prominent citizens expressed confidence that the democratic ticket would win in November.

Senator Harris, who arrived here early this week with his brother, Major General Peter C. Harris, to attend the annual Harris family reunion in Cedar town, said "Davis and Bryan form one of the strongest tickets ever nominated by either of the two big parties. I believe the democrats will win." The senior Georgia senator paid high tribute to Davis and Bryan for their "strong, virile Americanism and ability."

A Brilliant Lawyer

Senator Harris and Mr. Davis are warm personal friends and have been for many years. "I was in Washington when Davis was in congress," the senator said, "and I know him to be one of the greatest living lawyers in the United States, a commonsense, practical, courageous American, and one more nearly embodying those principles advocated by Woodrow Wilson than any candidate considered for the democratic nomination. He will command the respect of the world and the humblest citizen will feel proud of him as a standard bearer and as a president."

"He was a poor boy," the senator continued, "working his own way along in life, and the fact that he lived in a small town and was a country lawyer" once, only adds weight to the opinion that he is one of the nation's greatest sons. His rise to the front ranks among lawyers of the nation, his great service as ambassador to England under Wilson and his services as solicitor general in the state department attest to his great character, capability and earnestness of purpose." Senator Harris stated that Davis is one of the most gifted orators in the United States, "and when he goes before the rank and file of voters of this country he will get their support."

Praise for Bryan.

Speaking of Governor Bryan, of Nebraska, nominee for vice president, Senator Harris said, "Nebraska and other states in the middle west will be found in democratic columns in November. Governor Bryan is a big man, has a great record as governor of his state and has accomplished something worthwhile. Like Davis, he is in sympathy with the masses, is approachable, unassuming and can be trusted."

relied upon implicitly. Bryan is a really big man."

Senator Harris pointed out that many high places in government circles had been offered Mr. Davis, referring particularly to a place on the supreme court bench which the democratic nominee declined. Davis' attitude during the recent national convention, Senator Harris said, was indicative of the big man he really is.

"Well Fitted," Says Walker.
Governor Clifford Walker is personally acquainted with Mr. Davis and considers him "exceptionally well fitted to be the standard bearer of the democrats." Mr. Davis was solicitor general in the state department when Governor Walker was admitted to practice in the United States supreme court.

"He is the brainiest and most brilliant man who has been mentioned for the post to which he was nominated," Governor Walker said. "Viscount Bryce, of England, stated at a banquet that he was the most eloquent and ablest minister that the United States had sent to England in fifty years, and he is a capable judge."

Hardwick's Statement.
Former Governor Hardwick, now a candidate against Senator Harris for the United States senate, said: "I regard the nomination of the ticket named in New York Wednesday night as the wisest and strongest that could have been made, and I earnestly hope and firmly believe that the ticket will be successful in the November election."

"I served several years in the house of representatives with Mr. Davis, our nominee for president, and I am well acquainted with him personally and as a public man; he is clean, able, and splendidly equipped. He is a genuine democrat, and believes in the fundamental doctrines and cardinal principles of the party. He is sane, conservative and constructive. I hope and believe that he will be elected, and if so, I confidently predict he will make the country a great president."

"I believe that Governor Bryan's selection as the nominee for vice president was a most happy one. He is a man of sanity and force, and has made Nebraska a most excellent governor. He comes from the great middle west, and his nomination ought to help the ticket."

"The democrats of the entire country should get together and support the ticket wholeheartedly, and carry it to victory in November."

Ansley Park Home
This is one of the finest homes, comparing in a favorable way with the most elegant homes in the city. It is located in what is conceded to be the choice part of Ansley Park and we would say that there is no more desirable place to live in all the Southern States than this locality.

About the only opportunity that ever presents itself to buy a fine home at value is when some owner for business reasons leaves the city and this is a case of such a kind. We can offer this home completely furnished so that the purchaser may move in at once without undergoing the work of selecting furniture.

This is a large 2-story brick structure, having nine rooms and two baths, with steam heat. It has all the equipment and appointments that go with the modern home. Feel free to ask our salesmen for an appointment to see the interior.
